15 More to Face U. S. Charges in Nazi Spy 'Ring'

Government Official Says 18 Now Accused 'Only Start'; New Indictments to Name Present, Former German Officials; Espionage Jury to Renew Quiz.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—Another sensation-laden document, naming 15 more men and women as members of the Nazi espionage ring, will be returned shortly by the special federal grand jury which shattered diplomatic peace-time precedent by accusing four high officers of the German war ministry of leadership of the syndicate.

This prediction was made today by a government official closely connected with the case. He added that yesterday's indictment naming 18 persons, two of them women, were "just a good start."

"There are many others involved," this official declared. "Some of these are American citizens who assisted the ring and others are persons whose names have figured prominently from the start. As soon as the investigation is complete, a much more detailed picture will be made public."

It was further predicted that among the indictments expected when the grand jury resumes its hearings will be the names of one or more Germans with official or semi-official connections with the Nazi regime.

One of these, it was said, will be a German resident of New York whose social position and reputation are much higher than those of the fugitive, Dr. Ignatz T. Griebl, reputed "brains" of the conspiracy in this country.

Washington Approves.

The sensation caused by the blunt charges against the German military officers, one of them head of the German secret service, had the approval of the administration.

Before the names of the officers were returned in the indictments, it was revealed, United States Attorney Lamar Hardy went to Washington and obtained the tacit consent of the departments of justice and state. He outlined his case to Attorney General Cummings and other officials and from them received the permission to make a full exposure of the extent and ramifications of the ring, from the lowliest pawn to the high command.

No information on the ultimate extent of the investigation, or on the 15 more indictments expected, could be obtained from Hardy or Leon G. Turrou, the veteran G-man who worked on the case

CALLS COUNCIL

Mayor Sets Session Tonight to Act on Water Bonds.

Mayor Claude M. Hunter today called a special meeting of city council for tonight to act on the sale of $64,000 in waterworks mortgage revenue bonds to finance the Woodland water improvements.

The mayor said it was the desire of city officials to sell the bonds as soon as possible so the Woodland job, a WPA project, could be launched at the earliest possible moment. He added that City Auditor Paul L. Kelley had studied the 14 bids submitted and that two of the proposals would be submitted to council for consideration.

Kelley explained that the bids were those of the Richland Trust company and the Johnson-Kase and company of Cleveland. He said that the Johnson-Kase bid was $113 higher than the Mansfield company but that there were several "intangible items" that had to be considered.

PUSH HUNT FOR MISSING GIRL, 5

Wheeling Child Feared Victim of Kidnaper.

WHEELING, W. Va.—(INS)—The entire detective squad was assigned by Capt. Albert Custer today to investigate the disappearance of Marjorie Lee Cutler, 5, who was regarded as a possible kidnap victim by authorities.

The child is the daughter of Mrs. Dorothy Cutler, an employe of the Mail Pouch tobacco company. Mrs. Cutler is in moderate circumstances, according to police.

Marjorie was last seen by her brother, Billy, 13, talking to an aged man who was coaxing her to go with him for an ice cream cone.

MEETS DEATH IN CRASH ON CURVE

Shreve Youth Ashland County's 4th Traffic Victim of Year; Collides With Truck.

(By Staff Correspondent)

ASHLAND — Ashland county's fourth traffic death of the year was inscribed on the record today, following an automobile-truck collision early this morning in which Walter L. Franks, 22, of Shreve, was almost instantly killed. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Franks.

The accident occurred about 4:30 a. m. today on route 250, seven miles north of Ashland, according to Deputy Sheriff Dale Hammond, who investigated. Hammond reported that Franks, driving toward Ashland, sideswiped a truck driven by Angelo Blas, 26, headed north. The crash occurred on a curve, Hammond reported. He said he believed Franks may have fallen asleep at the wheel.

The impact split Franks' car almost in two, and an iron bar on the side of the truck was driven completely through Franks' head. He died a few minutes after the accident, while being taken to Ashland hospital. Dr. E. L. Clem, Ashland, who was called, said death was due to loss of blood from the wound.

Blas, the truck driver, was not held by authorities.

Franks' body will be taken to the Morgan funeral home at Shreve. Funeral arrangements were incomplete today

TREASURY GETS SIX BILLIONS

U. S. Revenues Near Roosevelt Estimate For Fiscal Year.

WASHINGTON —(INS)—Government revenues topped $6,000,000,000 today as income tax receipts for the second quarter pumped nearly $450,000,000 into treasury vaults.

Total receipts for the present fiscal year were $6,041,917,173, of which $2,517,099,970 were income taxes. At this time a year ago revenues amounted to $5,063,096,884.

In his budget message, President Roosevelt predicted receipts for the 1938 fiscal period which ends June 30 would total $6,320,513,000.

Shelby Kills 'Sandbag' Gas Ordinance For Straight Rate

(By Staff Correspondent)

SHELBY — Apparently taking the action of Mansfield council as a guide, Shelby council last night killed an ordinance calling for a five-year rate contract with the Ohio Fuel Gas company, with a "sandbag" clause for the final period, and gave a first reading to a three-year contract calling for a straight rate.

The new straight rate ordinance was introduced last night by Councilman Charles Swanger, and was given a first reading. It calls for a rate of $1 for the first 1,000 feet, 60 cents a thousand for the next 4,000 feet, and 50 cents a thousand for all over that amount, averaging 68 cents a thousand for the 5,000-foot user per month.

Before Swanger called for a reading of his bill, Councilman Chester Bell moved that the five-year measure be brought up for final passage. He was seconded by Kenneth Rothlisberger. All four members present then voted against the measure. Councilman C. E. Morris was absent. At the first two readings, only Swanger and Councilman John Chew had opposed the measure. Rothlisberger, Bell and Morris favored it.

Kenneth Gallant, Shelby manager of the Ohio Fuel Gas company would not comment on the new ordinance, and W. C. Mead, division manager of the company at Mansfield, could not be reached today for comment.

The company will have 30 days to accept or reject the ordinance if it is finally passed by council.

Seeks Vote in August on School Bonds

BOARD ACTS TO BRING ISSUE UP IN PRIMARY

Asks State Tax Commission to Allow $550,000 Plan to Go on Ballot.

WOULD FINANCE BUILDING

Issue Designed to Supplement $450,000 Federal Grant Sought From PWA.

The Mansfield board of education today sought the consent of the state tax commission to submit a proposed $550,000 bond issue to Mansfield voters Aug. 9 for financing the board's $1,000,000 school building program.

Funds from the bond issue would supplement an anticipated $450,000 federal grant for the construction of two junior high school buildings in the city, a shop building at Senior high school, and modernization of a number of elementary buildings.

2 Levies On Ballot, Too.

If the board is authorized to submit its program to the voters in August, there will be two levies and a bond issue on the ballot at the primary. Besides the school plan, Mansfield voters will be asked to ballot on two relief levies, one for two mills for the city of Mansfield and the other for one mill for Madison township.

At least two more levies are in prospect for the November election. One of them is the renewal of the three-mill operating levy for Mansfield schools and the other would call for one mill for three years to finance the county's program for tuberculosis patients.

Seen as Aid to PWA Grant.

After more than an hour's discussion last night the board of education decided to submit the bond issue in August so as to strengthen the chances of obtain-

Minneapolis Primary Shows Swing to Farmer-Labor.

MINNEAPOLIS—(AP)—Gov. Elmer A. Benson pushed ahead of his challenger, Hjalmar Peterson, for the Farmer-Labor gubernatorial nomination in Monday's primary election, as additional returns were compiled today.

Benson had a 4,438 lead on the basis of 1,641 of 3,739 precincts in the state. Petersen's margin, built up with rural votes, was slashed heavily when a batch of ballots came in from Hennepin county (Minneapolis), Benson stronghold.

The two Farmer-Labor candidates polled 75,000 votes more than the four Republican aspirants lending credence to the belief that thousands of Republican voters had jumped the party fence.

Dirlam Rites Tomorrow, Final Chapter In Tragedy

Ashes of Two Mansfield Students Who Died In Crash of Airliner to Be Buried Beside Father.

The last chapter in the Dirlam tragedy will be written tomorrow when the ashes of J. Tracy Dirlam, 22, and his sister, Mary Lou, 19, are buried in Mansfield cemetery beside the still fresh grave of their father, Jay N. Dirlam.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. at the Dirlam home, Shepard road, Woodland, for the two victims of a TWA plane crash. Mrs. Rachel Dirlam, their mother, and her only surviving child, Sally, 13, arrived yesterday afternoon from Fresno, Cal., bringing the ashes of her two children who were killed March 1, when the luxury liner crashed in a blinding snowstorm. The bodies were found in the plane wreckage June 11, near the peak of Buena Vista mountain.

Separate Graves.

Cremation services were held in Fresno last Wednesday and the ashes sealed in silver urns. After the services tomorrow afternoon they will be placed in small sealed steel casks and buried in separate graves in Mansfield cemetery. Rev. Peter Young, pastor of First Congregational church, will conduct the services which will be open to friends of the Dirlam family and of Tracy and Mary Lou.

The two casks will be buried by the side of the late Jay N. Dirlam, father of the victims of the plane tragedy, who died several days after the crash without learning of the death of his children. They were flying to his bedside from Leland Stanford university where they were both students, when the airliner fell.

Mrs. Dirlam, who remained in California during the three-month seach for the plane, said today that when the wreckage was found the bodies of passengers were scattered over a wide area, but those of her two children were close together. Positive identification was made by a bracelet on Mary Lou's arm, and a wallet in Tracy's pocket.

Beside the mother and younger sister, immediate survivors of the Dirlams are their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus A. Tracy, Park avenue west, and Howard Dirlam, Park avenue west, and a number of uncles and aunts.

COACH LIFTED

MILES CITY, Mont.—(U.P.)—The mud-covered tourist sleeping car was lifted from the slime of Custer creek today and two bodies were removed from it. Workers previously had recovered 35 bodies of men, women and children killed Sunday when the crack Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific passenger train, "The Olympian," crashed through a trestle. The final toll may reach 55.

When the 100-ton railroad derrick finally succeeded in lifting one end of the heavy car from the water, workers climbed inside. They brought out two bodies and then work was suspended until the derrick could be reinforced as engineers feared the strain might cause it to topple.

Those who entered the sleeper could not estimate the number of bodies it contained.

LIQUOR DIRECTOR NAMED IN SUIT

Mrs. Dickinson Seeks to Recover $413,370 In 'Illegal' Fees.

COLUMBUS—(INS)—Suit to recover $413,370 from State Liquor Director James Miller and the Glen Falls Indemnity Co., his bondsmen, was filed today in county court by Agnes Dickinson, attorney.

The sum, she alleged, equals an excess outlay for transportation of state-owned liquor, dating back to February, 1934. It represents, she said, the difference between what the state actually paid and the sum for which it should have had the hauling done.

SEARCH SWAMPS

500 Hunt Jersey Girl, 18, Missing Three Days.

HAMMONTON, N. J — (INS) — Tired but determined, 500 searchers trudged doggedly through snake-infested swamplands today in search of 18-year-old Thelma Redfield who has been missing since Sunday.

The Redfield family visited Thelma's uncle, State Fire Warden Fonte Gale, in the swampland region Sunday. When members of the family prepared to return to Woodbury, Thelma was discovered missing.

HEALTH BACK, COPPER QUITS POLICE FORCE

Court Dismisses Officer From Custody, He Then Turns in Resignation.

GIVEN PAY FOR 2 MONTHS

Waives All Claims to Pension Rights in Return for Back Salary.

Harry Copper, a member of the Mansfield police department for the last nine years, who was discharged as a court ward yesterday, submitted his resignation today to Service-Safety Director Tracy C. Styert.

Appearing at Styert's office this morning, Copper resigned and in return for waiving all future claims for disability or pension, he was given two months pay of $300 which had been held up during the 60-day rest period that he had been in custody of the probate court.

One Sentence Resignation.

Copper's resignation of only one sentence read: "I hereby tender my resignation as patrolman of the police department effective this date."

With the signing of the waiver, Copper after nine years of police duty lost all rights to a police pension.

Copper's action followed a hearing before Probate Judge C. J. Anderson yesterday afternoon at which time he was discharged as a ward of the court with the recommendation that he seek work other than police duty. The hearing was held following an examination by Dr. B. E. Shreffler who reported that Copper's mental condition was improved.

Convinced Health Back.

Judge Anderson said he was convinced that the rest period had accomplished the desired results and had restored the patrolman back to health. Copper was declared "mentally ill" by the court at a sanity hearing two months ago after he threatened his wife and children with his service revolver.

Acting to fill the vacancy in the police ranks, Director Styert said he wrote the Civil Service commission asking it to certify three men eligible for appointment. The eligible list, made from a recent examination, will be forwarded to Mayor Claude M. Hunter who will make the appointment.

Copper was appointed to the police department in 1929 and for the past three years had been working as a plain clothesman in the detective bureau. He was interested in juvenile work and the court was told that strain of the job and financial worries had been the cause for his mental condition.

CHINA BOLSTERS DEFENSE LINES

Strengthens Forces as Floods Stall Japanese Troops.

SHANGHAI —(AP)— China reorganized and strengthened Hankow's defense today while Japan's offensive against the temporary capital remained stuck in the mud by the spreading flood of the Yellow river

Every day's delay to the Japanese, the Chinese high command said, has been used to bolster strategic points blocking what is expected to be Japan's line of attack deeper into China's heart.

They said Chinese lines now were virtually prepared to withstand any onslaught while Japan's mechanized army still was bogged in the mire of the flooded battlefields.

Elaborate July Fourth Program Set

Hundreds to Take Part In Nationality Skits and History Cavalcade.

A Fourth of July celebration which promises to be the most elaborate that Mansfield has ever seen will be held at the Richland County Fairground on Independence day, with hundreds taking part in a nationality program, horse racing, boxing matches, a cavalcade of American history, and a huge fireworks display.

There will be a continuous program from 1 to 10 p. m..

The cavalcade of American history, told in song, tableaux and dramatic highlights, will be staged on the new Westinghouse revolving stage, under the direction of J. Gilbert Baird and R. O. Richards, who have produced a number of Westinghouse shows.

Band and choral music, impersonations of great Americans, marching soldiers and dancing ensembles will tell the story of America from the time Patrick Henry made his famous speech up to the present.

Fireworks Climax.

The cavalcade goes on the stage from 7:30 to 9 p. m. and from 9 to 10 there will be a display of fireworks, topping even last year's exhibition. The fireworks will carry out the historical idea, too, for the old Mansfield blockhouse, with an attack by the Indians, will be reconstructed in fire. The set was especially designed for Mansfield.

The afternoon program will be presented by the playgrounds of the city and nationality societies. Such groups as the Italians, the German Liederkrantz, the Macedonians and Bulgarians, and the Slovaks, will each stage their own act in native costumes.

Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts will take part in the flag raising ceremony which opens the afternoon program. Between acts of entertainment there will be heats of trotting and pacing races. Amateur boxing by boys from the Friendly House is being arranged. Band concerts will be presented throughout the day.

Loud speakers will carry the program to all parts of the Fairgrounds. The entire program and fireworks exhibition will be free.

Funds to finance the fireworks display are being raised by popular subscription under the direction of the Mansfield Public Parks association of which Roy W. Vaughn is president Walter Underwood is chairman of the committee soliciting funds.

BORROWS FUND

Cleveland 'Mortgages' Sales Tax Revenue for Relief.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Again without funds for the care of 66,000 destitute, a desperate municipal administration moved today to borrow approximately $400,000 against anticipated 1939 state sales tax revenue.

The city council, in an emergency resolution, last night directed Finance Director G. A. Gesell to apply to the Ohio tax commission to borrow the city's share on $1,300,000 in notes authorized by the legislature in a lending bill.

Mayor Harold H. Burton told the council, however, that he believed the bill "fundamentally unsound."

"If we borrow the $400,000 now," he said, "next year we will have to put $400,000 extra on the real estate tax."

POWERS JOIN CAMPAIGN TO END CIVIL WAR

Britain, Italy Co-operate to Halt Hostilities So Pact Will Become Effective.

ARMS SUPPLY CUT OFF

Prospects of Agreement Good, Conferees Say; Russia Backs New Negotiations.

(By International News Service)

LONDON — For the first time since the Spanish civil war flared out of a political assassination into a holocaust almost two years ago, the nations of Europe embarked upon a concerted and apparently sincere attempt today to bring a quick end to the hostilities.

Members of the chairman's subcommittee of the international non-intervention committee reached agreement on a "majority of points" in the British compromise plan for withdrawal of foreign volunteers.

Arms Shipments Cease.

At the same moment, the Franco-Spanish border was closed tight as a drum, cutting off for the first time the supplies of arms and ammunition which have passed through French territory en route to the government side in Spain.

Fate of the non-intervention agreement, it was learned, depends upon solution of controversial issues including that of sea control. Observers were inclined to believe these problems would be settled before evening.

With obvious gratification, a Whitehall spokesman declared the government was satisfied that the Franco-Spanish frontier is "now effectively closed" to passage of all arms.

Many factors were believed responsible for the sudden international determination to end or at least localize the conflict.

One was the desire of Great Britain and Italy to make effective the Anglo-Italian understanding reached in April. Great Britain has made this contingent upon withdrawal of Italian volunteers from Spain.

Crops Worry Duce.

Another was said to be the increasingly grave economic situa-

New Serial, Ideal For Summer, Will Begin Tomorrow

Ideal for summer reading will be the new short serial which will be introduced in the Wednesday issue of The News-Journal, for this story of a girl who was at the end of her rope and dangling dangerously, will run approximately half as long as the regular serial, or less.

"Heart On Her Sleeve," by Alma Sioux Scarberry, who has written several interesting serials for The News-Journal, will be concluded in about 15 chapters, or a little more than two weeks.

The story is one of modern young people in New York City; a pretty homeless girl, a chivalrous and talented boy from the hills of Kentucky; a swing band leader and a girl who is on her own since her parents' divorce.

It is light and romantic—ideal summer reading.

Roosevelt, Kennedy to Confer Today On Troubles In Europe

(By International News Service)

HYDE PARK, N Y.—President Roosevelt planned to sit down in his Hyde Park study today and listen to an all-important report on the delicate European situation from bespectacled Joseph P. Kennedy, America's ambassador to London.

The New Deal's ace troubleshooter, belittled upon arrival in New York yesterday the idea he was bringing back any formula for a settlement of the British world war debt to this country, but conceded he would make "an economic and political report."

Although Kennedy returned to the United States for the ostensible and personal reason of seeing his son, Joseph, jr., graduate from Harvard, the ambassador appeared to be in possession of a comprehensive picture of Europe's trials and tribulations from all angles.

It was regarded significant that just before Kennedy left London he had conferred with all top heads of British government, and in addition the diplomatic representatives in London of France, Germany and Italy.

Still before the president awaiting final disposition were the three big bills passed just as congress adjourned—relief-recovery, wages-and-hours, and the final deficiency appropriation measure. It was expected all would be signed today or tomorrow.

Adolescent Problems Considered

By VIRGINIA LEE

Mothers (and fathers, too) of course) have pretty tough times guiding their adolescents through that trying period. They usually come through all right, but parents have to be very understanding, patient and sympathetic not to create problems that have unpleasant results all the rest of their lives.

A mother who has forgotten that when she was 15, 16 or 17 she was attracted to the boys and had a secret—or open—preference for a certain youth, is going to estrange her young daughter from her—maybe for all time. And the mother who refuses to admit that her boy can be interested in a little girl and should not be discouraged in his little affairs, is likewise going to run into trouble.

DEAR MISS LEE: I am 16 and a senior at high school Recently I met a girl whom I like very much. She is both intelligent and respectable. I have introduced her to my mother who agrees that she is a nice girl, but in spite of this she will not permit me to take her out.

"We only go out during the day and when we do go it is only to such places as the parks or theater. I would like to know if you think my mother is being fair to me and to the girl. A. P.

"P. S. I have a job after school and I make enough money of my own to be able to afford a few dates with a nice girl."

No, I do not think your mother is fair, A. P. In fact, I think she is very unwise to show jealousy of your little girl friend at this stage of the game. I think it would be much better for her to welcome her and allow you to go out with her on such innocent dates as you mention

Possibly, however, she has reasons for her actions that you or I do not know about, and as long as you are so young, I think you will have to do as she says. Try to find out what her motives are.

* * *

DOT: A girl of 17 is not too young to go with boys if they are of good reputation and known and approved by her parents, I would not advise too late hours for any young girl, however.

Why do you not tell your mother you want to go out occasionally and ask her permission? If you are allowed to go to dances, surely you would be permitted to have a boy friend to go with you. If you were my girl I would feel much safer if you were with a young friend—provided I knew and felt I could trust him.

* * *

S. "BUT" S. Is a boy and likes a certain girl, but she is mad at him. She won't even speak to him when they meet. She is mad, I gather from his letter, because he doesn't go to see her, and he can't go to see her while she is mad at him. So what to do? It is an impasse, you see.

As neither of you goes with any one else, I don't see why you cannot brace up and go to see her. It wouldn't be any harder than feeling bad about not being with her, would it? You must take your courage in both hands and have a talk with her. Why should you both be lonesome when a little talk would make you both happy? Do as I say. Don't be afraid.

WHAT IS HIS REASON?

WHEN YOUR partner does not lead the suit he bid, there must be a reason. If the contract is at a suit, isn't his choice of another lead usually due to one factor? Such being the case, what do you do if you win an early trick and happen to hold the ace of his suit? Don't you lay down the ace to see if he plays a high card to urge its repeat?

East passed as dealer and South started the bidding on this deal with 1-Spade. West overcalled with 2-Hearts, North put in a bid of 3-Diamonds, South responded with 3-Spades, North 4-Diamonds and South 4-Spades.

When West opened the club 9 against this contract, the 2 was played from dummy and East won with the J. He now cashed the club A, and figuring that West's play indicated he wished to ruff that suit, continued with a third club. West won and returned a diamond, which South won with the K. After three rounds of trumps, declarer led to the diamond J, and on the A and Q discarded his two losing hearts.

Even if East figured West wished a ruff in clubs, his correct procedure was to have played the heart A first and find out from West's discard just what he desired.

Get Exercise While Tubing, Adds Life

By JULIET SHELBY.
(Central Press Writer on Beauty)

Get new life into your body if you are starting out on an active day. About the best way to do the trick is to start the morning with a good warm bath and a rub-down with your bath brush Then top this off with some limbering exercises that you can do right there in the tub. This short but pleasant interlude will make you feel equal to anything, and will really do wonders in correcting any of those annoying skin problems that occasionally occur on arms, legs and back.

Run a warm bath, hop into it and scrub away vigorously with a brush and your favorite soap After you have scrubbed for a moment you will feel the quickening circulation and a glow permeating your whole system. And all the time you are giving your body a thorough cleansing.

This will take away all the perspiration waste brought to the pores of the skin by the blood. It will also benefit sallow and blemished skins. The forced activity of the blood stream gives a more normal coloring to the skin, and the removal of damaging substances in the pores hastens the departure of skin eruptions. Then, too, certain portions of the back can be reached and scoured if you employ the use of a long-handled brush designed to fit the curve of the back.

Exercises Come Next.

Now for the ten-minute limbering exercises. If you can take it, follow your exercises with a cold shower and you will truly be awake and alert. Sit in the tub with your feet outstretched. Bend your body forward and with the bath brush thoroughly soap and scrub your toes without bending your knees. Use your right hand for the right foot and your left for the left foot, then alternate. This makes the muscles in the thighs, arms, shoulders and back more flexible.

Second with your feet crossed and with the brush in the right hand, scrub downward over the left shoulder as far as you can reach. Repeat with the left hand, scrubbing over the right shoulder. This exercises the muscles under the arms.

Third, stretch the feet straight out. Then bring the knees up and rest your chin on them. With the brush scrub down the center of the back as far as you can reach. Attempt to keep your chin on your knees. Alternate your hands. This movement is excellent for the nerves and circulation.

Repeat each of the limbering motions several times. Then finish off with a brisk towel rub down. This is almost as good as a Turkish bath, because your skin gets several good cleansing massages.

Hot Grapefruit.

Did you know that grapefruits can be served hot as well as cold?

Select medium-large smooth-skinned grapefruit. Cut each grapefruit in half, core and remove the seeds. Sprinkle one tablespoon of sugar over the top of each half. Heat through in a medium oven for about ten minutes, then place the grapefruit under the flame of the broiler and allow to broil for seven to ten minutes.

Rust on kitchen sinks may be removed by rubbing kerosene over the rust spots. Let stand for some time, then wash with scouring powder.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

As I waited for Hank to come to the speaking tube, I racked my brain for some errand on which I could send him. But necessity refused to exercise her celebrated maternal function, and I was almost in despair when I heard his voice, decidedly strained, no doubt with the remembrance of the scene I had witnessed when he had slapped Junior..

"Do you want to see me, Aunt Madge?" he asked placatingly, and I realized that he expected a summons to my room, and a disciplinary interview. The knowledge, so far from my thought, shocked me into concocting a plausible errand.

"I always want to see you, Hank," I said disarmingly, "but it's something else I want of you just now. I have promised Mrs. Ticer to bring her a jar of preserved ginger from Chinatown, and I won't have the chance to take it to her myself. If you'll ask Katie to give it to you—she knows where I put it yesterday when I came—I wish you would take the jar over to Mrs. Ticer with my compliments."

"Okay!" Hank's voice was brimming with relief. Then he hesitated.

"Shall I walk over?" he asked, and I was glad he could not see my amused smile.

"No, you probably would be late for dinner," I replied. "You may take my car, but—be careful."

"You bet," he returned heartily, and I put in a quick request for Bill before he hung up the tube.

"Please ask Bill to come directly to my room," I said. "I have something I want him to do."

"Okay!" he answered again, and I spent the time before Bill's knock upon my door in a very torment of indecision as to what I should say to the boy.

But at his knock, as is so often the way, my indecision fled.

"Come in, Bill, and sit down," I greeted him smilingly.

"Hank said you wanted me for something, Aunt Madge," he said.

"I do, Bill," I said; "something very important, something I hate to ask of you, because it involves telling you something—unpleasant. But I'm sure you're going to take it like the brave, true boy you are."

He had misunderstood me entirely! I knew that when I saw the quick fear in his eyes.

"Mary!" He faltered out the name of his idolized sister fearfully. "Has anything happened to her?"

"No, no!" I answered with quick emphasis. "Nothing has happened to anybody that you know."

"Then—" he fairly gasped his relief—"I don't care how unpleasant the thing is you want me to do, bring it along."

"It isn't that I want you to do something unpleasant," I explained, warily feeling my way along. "It's that I have to tell you something unpleasant."

He was suddenly tense, his eyes fixed attentively upon mine.

"Is it—is it—about Hank?" he faltered.

There was something about the query that brought a lump into my throat. That he, wise and thoughtful beyond his years, had seen Hank's tendencies, tried to correct them, and carried the burden of them unshared in his soul was very plain to me. So was his present divided emotion between shame that I should know about Hank, and hope that he could wrap his burden in the cloak of my loving sympathy.

"Yes, Bill, it's about Hank," I said slowly, "but you mustn't be alarmed. We're simply going to try to do something very special for Hank, and we need your help."

"Whatever you want me to do, I will," he said simply, and I called my reserves of resolution to broach the subject of Hank's peculiarities.

"From what you said just now, and from what Aunt Katherine has told me of happenings at the camp, I am sure you can guess something of what I am going to tell you," I began. "Now remember, I am not asking you to tell me anything unless you think you ought to for Hank's sake, but if you do wish to say anything about this to me, you rest assured that I never will repeat anything you tell me to anyone."

He looked at me wildly for a second, then he buried his face in his hands, and although no sound came from his lips, his shoulders heaved with the sobs he could not quite control but of which I knew he was desperately ashamed.

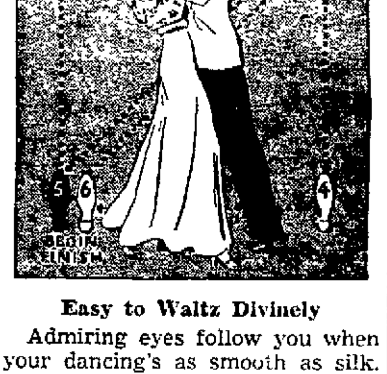
Improve Dance Steps With Home Practice.



Easy to Waltz Divinely

Admiring eyes follow you when your dancing's as smooth as silk.

How pleasant to match a dreamy waltz rhythm by taking an extra long gliding step on the first beat of each measure. Flex your knees slightly on that step to avoid the awkward bobbing motion that spoils the appearance of so many waltzing couples.

Our 32-page booklet gives basic steps and newest variations of waltz, fox-trot, tango, rumba, shag—footprint diagrams, expert step-by-step directions.

Today's Recipes.

MOLDED GRAPEFRUIT JUICE—Dissolve one package lemon flavored gelatin in one and one-fourth cups boiling water. Add three-fourths cup grapefruit juice, two tablespoons sugar and a dash of salt. Turn into molds. Chill until firm. Unmold and serve as a relish with the meat course or on lettuce with salad dressing.

Night Cap.

Try drinking a glass of grapefruit juice just before going to bed. It is said to produce restful sleep.

Varied Shortcakes.

With the shortcake season approaching, Barbara Stanwyck, screen star, declares that strawberry is only one brand of shortcake. Miss Stanwyck suggests that the ingenious cook remember that raspberries, blueberries, peaches and pineapple also can be used to advantage.

THEATER

CLEM McCARTHY, noted radio sports commentator, will play the announcer in "The Crowd Roars," the Robert Taylor re-make of the former Jim Cagney picture of a prize fighter . . . M-G-M finally was the victor in the race to get the movie rights of "The Life of Marie Curie." This is a biography of Mme Curie, co-discoverer of radium. Since the success of "Pasteur" and "Emile Zola," this type of story is much in demand . . . Mary Pickford's former DeLage auto, which cost $30,000 to build in 1917, and which took all of the awards for beauty, construction, and performance at the Paris exposition, will be seen again in the new version of "Shopworn Angel." It is still a car among cars—but makes only three miles on a gallon of gas . . . Mischa Auer and Herman Bing have been added to the cast of "Sweethearts" the new Jeanette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy musical . . .

Indifferent To Screen.

Margaret Sullavan, one of the screen's haughtiest ladies, has her first picture role since the birth of her baby, in "Three Comrades," at the Ohio. Miss Sullavan, who has one of the loveliest voices and is one of the screen's best actresses, turns a very cool shoulder to Hollywood. She was an overnight hit after her first picture, "Only Yesterday," but flipped aside a contract calling for thousands to play in summer stock at a comparatively ridiculous salary. Even after her success in "So Red The Rose" and "The Moon's Our Home," she returned to the New York stage to play in "Stage Door." Now however, she has signed a long term contract with M-G-M, and big things are planned for her. Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone and Robert Young are featured with her in "Three Comrades."

* * *

Life and Death Cross.

With death all about them two people face life together at the end of "The General Died At Dawn." They are saved from death themselves only because a quick witted soldier of fortune remembers a Chinese war lord's love for personal publicity and trades on it. A war torn China is graphically brought to the screen in "The General Died At Dawn," at the Majestic. The beauteous Madeliene Carroll and Gary Cooper are the two who are trapped by the war lord, played by Akim Tamiroff. Spies, espionage and intrigue run parallel with an interesting love story. A gay musical romance, with several tuneful numbers and an Hawaiian celebration, are found in "Waikiki Wedding," the Bing Crosby picture. Both of these features open today at the Majestic.

* * *

Mae's Holiday.

"Every Day's A Holiday," the seventh of the Mae West pictures and the last one the star has made, is the chief attraction of the two-feature bill at the Ritz. In this the curvacious star "gives vent to her feelin's" and is guilty of every sin except murder and arson. One suspects there were no matches handy or the latter would have been in her list. She covers her famous cream-colored hair with a black wig for several sequences and looks very fetching as Mlle. Fifi. As usual there are no men but a swarm of men in her cast, among them Edmund Lowe, Charles Winninger, Lloyd Nolan, Charles Butterworth, Chester Conklin and Walter Catlett. The second feature is "Charlie Chan at Monte Carlo," a murder mystery laid in the famous gambling city.

Favorable Reaction.

While "The Birth of a Baby" opened to a better than average good house Sunday and has drawn several good houses a day since then, it has not done what could be called a spectacular business, according to theater attaches. However, the audience reaction has been favorable, they say. The film, which is being presented at the Madison all this week, was produced by the Special Pictures corporation. It is a dramatized story of maternity, picturing the various stages of pregnancy and presents a frank discussion of the proper behavior and care necessary for the expectant mother.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, June 22.

This may be a day of mixed influences among ruling planets. While there may be much activity and possibly excitement, it may be difficult to accomplish much of a constructive nature, since delays, obstacles and disappointments are presaged. A change or a short journey may proved profitable, and strangers may lend a hand in straightening out difficulties, but progress may be slow.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may experiences a year of contradictory circumstances, with much tension and activity but little accomplished, as there are crystallized conditions to break up, with signs of delays and disappointments.

A child born on this day may be serious, possibly morose and stubborn, although not wanting in some bright and progressive ideas and objectives. Such a child should be given much early encouragement and an optimistic outlook upon life.

Kerosene will cut grease, clean and disinfect a sink. A little poured down the sink pipe will leave the pipe free and clean.

BATH LOCATION VITAL FEATURE IN SMALL HOME

Careful Study Urged Before Building Plan Is Given Final Approval.

Persons contemplating construction of small homes to contain a single bathroom should give careful study to the location of the bath.

It should be so situated, preferably, that no other room has to be passed through in order to reach the bathroom from any part of the house. If this arrangement is not made, then the bath should be so located that it may be reached from the living room or dining room without going through a bedroom.

Careless planning has resulted in embarrassing lack of privacy in many small homes. The accompanying sketch shows a floor plan for a two-bedroom house in which the bathroom cannot be reached without going through a bedroom or the dinette-kitchen.

Obviously this is a highly undesirable arrangement, and it is unnecessary as well. In the second drawing the bath has been so located that it may be reached from any room in the house without passing through any other room. In this way the efficiency and privacy of the house has been enhanced.

The Federal Housing administration, in passing on eligibility of houses upon which an insured mortgage is desired, checks the plan for privacy in order to assure the prospective home owner he will not be a victim of impractical, inconvenient arrangement.

In existing dwellings where poor bathroom planning occurs, the privacy can sometimes be achieved by alteration. This is frequently found to be a costly project, and as a result the addition of a bath often offers a better solution to the problem. Funds for the construction of extra baths can be obtained from private lending institutions operating under the FHA Property Improvement Credit Plan

CONSIDERS CITY

Georgia Firm Discussed Opening Bottling Plant Here.

Mansfield is being considered as the location of a bottling plant by the Nehi company of Columbus, Ga., Mayor Claude M. Hunter was informed today in a letter requesting a sample of the city's water supply.

"We are discussing the advisability of opening bottling operations in Mansfield for the production of our various products," the company wrote the mayor.

An analysis of the city's water was asked in addition to an explanation regarding the source of supply.

James Herlihy, superintendent of the waterworks, said that a gallon carboy of the water would be shipped to the firm within the next few days along with complete information in answer to the firm's request

MYSTIC CLUB'S OUTING FRIDAY

All-Day Picnic To Be Held At Oak Park East of City.

Mansfield Masons and their friends will gather Friday at Oak park, five miles east of Mansfield on the Wooster road, for the annual Mystic club picnic and outing.

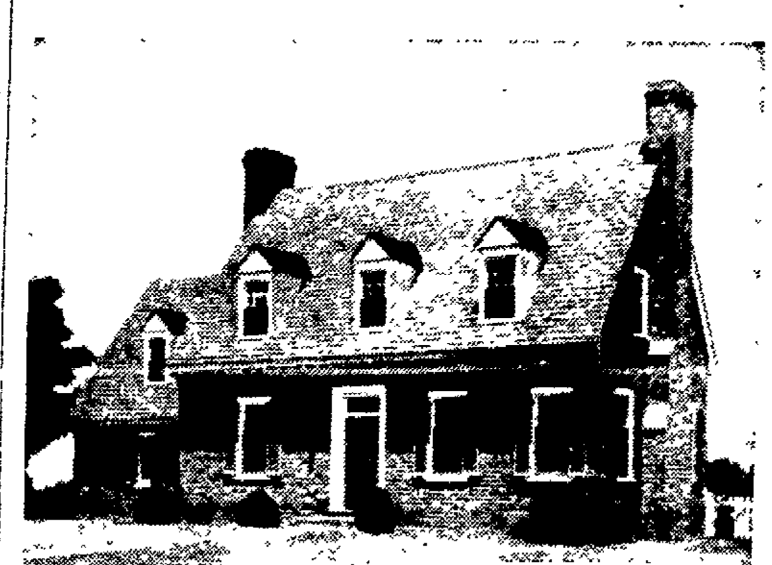
The picnic will be an all-day affair with dinner to be served at noon. Horseshoe and kittenball will be played during the day.

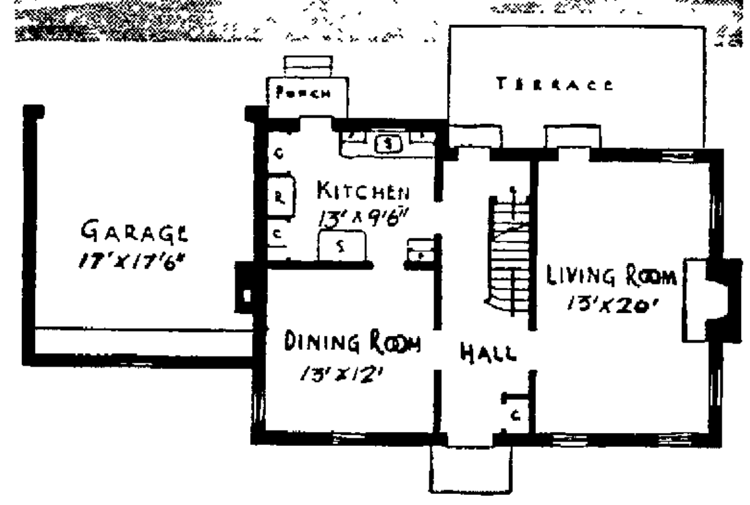
In the event of rain the affair will be held at the Masonic temple

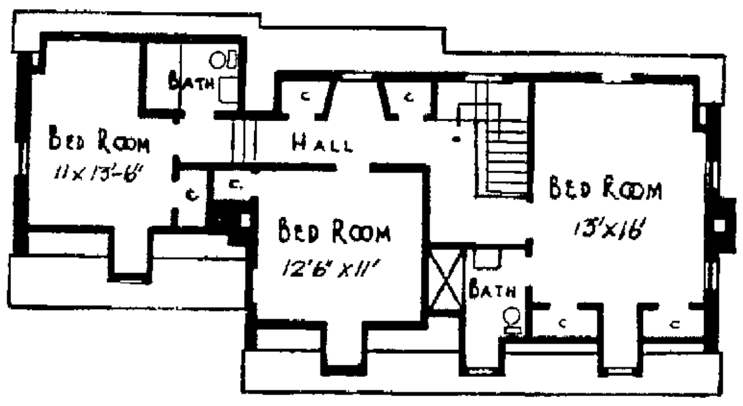
BLOND MAPLE

Blond maple furniture of taffy shade is used in a bedroom with medium blue painted walls. At the windows hang draperies in which the same blue is combined with old rose and cream. Window frames and baseboard are painted rose-beige, with ceiling and moldings of cream. A vanity bench is upholstered in blue with pink and cream stripes

Colonial of Brick and Slate







Sturdily built, with red brick walls and a slate roof, this small Richmond home captures the flavor of the older and larger colonial homes at Williamsburg, Va.

It has six main rooms and nine closets, and is planned around a central hall which leads from the front door to a rear terrace. Opening off the hall are a well-lighted living room of good proportion, dining room and kitchen. A two-car garage forms an adjoining wing. Upstairs are three generous size bedrooms and two baths.

The neat trim of the entrance doorway, cornice, dormers and windows is satisfactory and correct to the experienced eye.

The architest of this home was C. W Huff, jr., and it was selected by The American Home, 444 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y

HANDRAILS HELP PREVENT INJURY

In countless homes where stairs descend between walls no handrail is used. This is a cause of frequent accidents and should be corrected.

Funds may be obtained to build handrails from lending institutions insured by the Federal Housing Administration

CAREFUL PLANNING AND SOUND PRACTICES FOUND BENEFICIAL

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The Federal Housing administration's insistence on careful planning, sound building practices and the use of good materials in the homes offered as security for insured mortgages is playing an increasingly important part in the restoration of public confidence in the residential building field, Administrator Stewart McDonald said today.

In addition, the protective features which are part of the FHA regulations insure at least a minimum of protection for all classes of buyers in their home investments, McDonald pointed out.

"Outmoded houses of the last speculative era serve as constant reminders that some of the practices of home building and home financing in effect at the time they were built lacked sufficient protection for both borrower and lender alike," McDonald said. "It is a fact that, in years past, a property involving substandard conditions or characteristics adversely affecting surrounding properties was, when considered by itself, an acceptable mortgage security. We know, too, that in the late 20's due to the velocity of the real estate market the public was accepting planning and construction practices that were definitely substandard. Today's buyers of residential properties are, as the result of more widespread knowledge, demanding more intelligent planning and sound construction practices.

"The provisions of the Federal Housing administration program contain protective measures against just such conditions as this. An individual property offered as security for a mortgage to be insured by FHA must be considered not solely by itself but also its suitability in relation to other properties in the same neighborhood.

"FHA standards provide that homes must be substantial and durable in structure, convenient and efficient in arrangement, attractive in appearance. Furthermore, such properties must be considered in relation to visible trends in housing development and that they be located in neighborhoods which have, in considerable degree, security from disintegrating influences."

Board Sets Up Budget of $561,000 for City Schools

Shows Bond Retirement Needs to Drop $23,000 Next Year; Provides Increments.

A tentative budget calling for $561,098 for operation of Mansfield public schools in 1939 was approved last night by the board of education.

The figure is $3,087 more than the schools received this year. with added equipment replacements and growing cost of operation of the special schools for handicapped children accounting for part of the increase.

Bond interest and retirement needs for the year will drop to $85,263 from $108,115 in 1938. Bonds maturing during the next year total $60,000, and interest was estimated at $25,263. The schools' present total bonded indebtedness is $550,000.

Supervisor Salaries Hiked.

In the items for operation costs, major charges are in the salaries of supervisors, which Supt W. L. Miller pointed out, increased from $6,400 this year to $12,302 in 1938 due to the promotion of three men in the musical department from teachers to supervisor classification at marked salary raises.

At the same time, the cost of salaries of teachers in day schools dropped from $348,366 this year to $337,094 for 1939 as a result of the creation of the new music supervisor posts.

Provision is made in the budget for increments of $100 for all teachers below the maximum, and the raising of the elementary maximum from $1,800 to $1,900 and the senior high school maximum from $2,100 to $2,200.

The same provisions were made in the 1938 budget, but only the increment of $100 to teachers under the maximum was carried out. Total estimated cost of instruction for next year will show a reduction of $2,611 from the 1938 figures.

Plant Operations Up.

Operation of the school plant will cost $41,953 in 1939 as compared with $39,900 this year, according to the budget estimate, with the principal increases being for water, gas and insurance costs. Under the same heading, transportation of employes was jumped from $350 this year to an estimated $624 in 1939.

The budget committee's report said prospective income for the schools next year will be about the same as this year. There will be no tax levy outside the 0-mill limitation for bonds, since all bonds outside the limitation will be retired this year.

The present school rate is 1.6 mills inside the limitation for bonds, 2.9 mills inside for operation and three mills outside for operation. The operation levy outside the limitation expires this year.

Ousted TVA Head At 60, Ready For More 'Headaches'

YELLOW SPRINGS — (AP) — Starting his 61st year ready for new projects, Arthur E. Morgan nevertheless is making his immediate plans around a good, long rest, to start as soon as the congressional investigation of the Tennessee Valley Authority is over.

Morgan, deposed chairman of the TVA, was 60 yesterday. and in an interview declared he would take a job of similar scope, headaches or none, if it "had one chance in a hundred to succeed."

"But I've been going to a fire for 30 years," he added, "and I think I'll take a few months off and go fishing."

Morgan. who created the $35,000,000 Miami conservancy district and then turned from engineering to become president of Antioch college here until President Roosevelt called him to head the vast Tennessee valley project, renewed charges of maladministration in the TVA.

President Roosevelt. charging him with "contumacy," removed him several weeks ago.

"There is subterfuge in the TVA," Morgan said. "Right now, too, it is seething with conspiracy and with inquisition. The most painful thing about TVA to me was that those young men making up the staff should work where it was not what you know but whom you know that was worthwhile."

Up and Down THE STREET

Observance of his 77th birthday anniversary last Saturday was a part of the two-week vacation trip from which John E. Angle, pioneer Mansfield grocer, has just returned. He and Mrs. Angle went first to Chicago to attend the graduation of their son, Robert, from the medical department of Loyola college (Bob will interne a year and a half in Cook County hospital); then to Springfield, Ill., for a visit with their son, Paul, and family; thence homeward through Gary, Ind., for a visit with son, John, jr., and family.

A couple years ago, a brilliant business man, who was about 11 at the time, decided he could make money selling ice cream in downtown business offices. He was right—he did make money. And somehow word got around among other youngsters, with the result that this summer the downtown section is overrun with youthful ice cream salesmen, who appear in business offices as early at 8:30 a. m. (who ever heard of eating ice cream at that hour?) with their portable ice cream containers. One downtown office had three calls from youthful ice cream salesmen this morning within a period of an hour, and workers are beginnnig to wonder how long this is going to go on.

So far the year has been just a series of thrills for William Ansell of Willard, who has many friends in the city. The Willard youth, a student at the U. S. Naval School of Music, returned a few weeks ago as a member of the band accompanying President Roosevelt on his Caribbean cruise. And he was recently selected to serve in the band of a U. S. cruiser touring northern Europe. Paris, London and Copenhagen are just a few of the stops on the cruise. He has attended the Washington, D. C., school for eight months.

THINNING RANKS OF G. A. R. VETS APPEAL TO U. S. TO HAVE 'FAITH'

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS —Ohio's "Boys In Blue"—26 of them, hearty and strong—today viewed a troubled world without rancor or fear and urged Americans to have "faith."

Taking things easy in the twilight of lives well spent, the more active survivors of Ohio's Grand Army of the Republic are attending their 72nd encampment in Columbus this week.

These "oldsters" believe that foreign entanglements, debt and relief are the country's biggest problems.

They offered no sure-fire remedies for the problems. Their philosophy might be summed up by their national chieftain, Overton H. Mellet, Los Angeles, "young" 88-year-old commander, who said:

"We Americans are slow to recognize our troubles, both from within and without. But in the end we will protect ourselves against any influences that would destroy democracy. I have great faith in America and particularly its young people."

Frank French, 94, Johnstown, O., thought "perhaps" the United States would be "better off" without President Roosevelt.

"But," he added after reflection, "no matter whom we put in, he's got a tough job on his hands and may do no better."

French advised Americans to study the lessons of history. He warned against the United States "getting mixed up with foreign nations" as it seemed to be doing "more and more."

He said "Our biggest problem is the national debt. Once you start feeding a child, he wants more and more. It's bound to increase. But it will take a lot to upset America."

Thomas Ridenour, 92, Crestline, said, "Sometimes I think the world is getting better and sometimes worse. If you're already in debt, you can't borrow your way out."

SELLS BUS LINE

Awwiler Turns System Over to Buckeye Stages.

The Buckeye Stages System, operators of the Union Bus depot here, today announced the purchase of the Awwiler Coach Lines from J. H. Awwiler of Ashland.

According to George C. Geiselman, Buckeye Stages agent here, the company assumed operation of the line today, and replaced the Awwiler coaches with Buckeye buses.

The Awwiler line operated between Mansfield and Wooster through Ashland. The line was started in December 1922 between Mansfield and Ashland, and in 1926 the Ashland -Wooster run was added.

The purchase of the line by Buckeye Stages at the present will not affect present schedules, according to Geiselman.

During the 16 years the line was run by Awwiler, more than 800,000 passengers were hauled between Mansfield, Ashland and Wooster.

Sawyer Backed By 'Reds', CIO, Davey Says

GOVERNOR RIPS PRIMARY RIVAL AT CINCINNATI

Declares Red 'Booers' Hired by Opponent to Heckle Him at Toledo Meeting.

(By Associated Press)

CINCINNATI — Charging that "communist booers" who heckled him at a Toledo meeting last month were working for Charles Sawyer, Gov. Martin L. Davey asserted here last night that his opponent for the Democratic nomination for governor was the candidate of John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

In his first address in the home territory of Sawyer, Democratic national committeeman for Ohio and former lieutenant governor, Davey said:

"Last fall, Mr. Sawyer went to Washington to solicit the support of John L. Lewis. What promises he made I do not know, but he had to promise plenty, because Lewis drives a hard bargain.

Lewis' Candidate?

"The fact is that Mr. Sawyer is the candidate of John Lewis right now, and he doesn't dare repudiate John Lewis in an unequivocal manner sufficiently strong that it will convince John Lewis and his radical lieutenants, that he really means business and doesn't want the support of those un-American destroyers of labor."

Sawyer was not available and Lewis, in New York, declined comment. John Owens, CIO leader and Ohio president of labor's Non-Partisan league, announced in Columbus that August primary candidates would be discussed at a league meeting there June 28.

CIO leaders have expressed belief in the past that the rank and file of their members would vote for any candidate likely to defeat Governor Davey, but no public endorsements have been made.

Governor Davey declared the persons who heckled him at Toledo "made 50,000 extra votes for me in northwestern Ohio," and added:

"Now I make the charge that those communistic booers were the agents of Mr. Sawyer, and went to that meeting with the knowledge of himself or his lieutenants...."

The handicraft program begins Wednesday at the camp. Robert Fleming will act as instructor in leathercraft, and Robert Tobias and Wilton Morkel will act as photography instructors.

Registrations are still open for boys wishing to attend the camp, Chapman said.

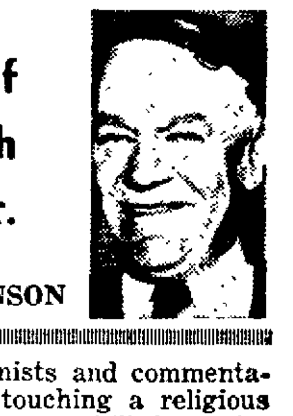
GEN. JOHNSON:

Background of trial of Jesus, comment on which stirred general protest.



—By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Lay columnists and commentators should never make any remark touching a religious issue. In a recent piece, I said: "Jesus was killed, not by the Jewish people, who adored him, but by a Roman executioner at the suggestion of the current palace brain trust."

Boy, did that draw a barrage of ecclesiatical dead cats! Didn't I know that I was disputing the word of God! Doesn't the whole world know that the Jews killed Christ? What did I mean by saying that they have been persecuted for that unjustly? Am I in the pay of a Semetic conspiracy and so on and on far, far into the week.

As a student of law, my hobby has been the tragic subject of the trial of Jesus. There are many books and papers—studies of that subject. All do not reach exactly the same conclusion, but the general result is that Jesus was condemned in violation of Jewish law in several of its fundamental principles.

* * *

It was engineered by the "high priests and elders"—either an official or an unofficial Sanhedrin—because He was interfering with their rackets and because of the growing devotion to Him of the mass of the Jewish people who, as I said, "adored Him." This small but powerful group who conspired to procure this judicial murder were what I called the "current palace Brain Trust."

The course of His double trial when traced from the legal angle, looks exactly like the course of modern abuses of the judicial system. First, they sent under-cover men to try to provoke Him into violations of both theirs and the Roman law. "It is lawful to give tribute unto Caesar, or not?"

And the questions of the Sadducees about the resurrection and of the Pharisees about the greatest commandment were for this purpose. It didn't work.

* * *

The conspiracy with Judas was an illegal attempt to surreptitiously to abduct Him for the purpose of giving Him a modern police third degree to get Him to incriminate Himself — which is exactly what the unlawful inquisitions by night before Annas and Caiaphas were.

The trial before the Sanhedrin, or a group of priests and elders, was very clearly a bum's rush railroading to death by a small group under a judicial disguise so shoddy that it has been attacked as violating Jewish law on no less than 30 fundamental points.

With all this, the Jewish people, as such, had nothing to do. On the contrary, the sole reason for all the haste, secrecy and illegality was that the conspirators were afraid that any violence offered to Jesus would result in riot, of not revolution.

* * *

This is quite clear from the fact that His triumphal entry into Jerusalem had just occured among the plaudits of the people and the plain statement by St. Matthew, "then assembled together the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders of the people, unto the palace of the high priest, who was called Caiaphas, and consulted that they might take Jesus by subtility and kill Him. But they said, 'Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar among the people.' "

They did take Him on the feast day but they did it in the secrecy and haste already discussed, because they were afraid of "the Jewish people who adored Him."

Finally, Jesus was not crucified for their conviction of blasphemy but by "a Roman executioner" on an entirely new charge by the "palace Brain Trust" that he was "stirring up" the Jewish people.

This is not a theological column. The statements which drew such fire were statements of law and history and not of religion. But they were not made in carelessness or ignorance. There is in them nothing to alter or retract.

Hollywood Speaks---

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Janet Gaynor's new leading man is 26, a former college instructor of English, a playwright, a stage director and an actor with a firm conviction that six months at a time in Hollywood is enough.

Richard Carlson signed a movie contract only when he got the kind he wanted—six months here, six months away from here.

Another thing he wanted in his contract was provision that he could write and direct as well as act. He got that too. That is not unusual. Hollywood frequently gives that type of contract. It is unusual, however, that Carlson seems to be doing something about it. He is already working on his first screen writing assignment, is already making periodical trips to cutting rooms and laboratories and all the studio departments to study the screen business from the inside out.

* * *

He has been writing plays since high school days in Minneapolis. At the University of Minnesota he kept on acting and writing and took on directing. In high school he had played football and hockey in addition to numerous extra-curricular activities. In college he concentrated on golf in the sports line, sailed through his regular courses with time to spare for dramatics. In 1934 he had his M. A. degree, Phi Beta Kappa, $2500 in scholarship prizes, and a job as English instructor. He stuck it out three months.

"By that time I'd realized the college life was not for me," he says. "It seemed like living in a world apart, behind a high protecting wall. I could look around and see examples of what I was afraid I might become. Professors who talked like pundits, positively, profoundly, dully. All were not like that, but enough were to frighten me away."

He took his $2500 and started the Minneapolis Repertory company. Merle Potter, Minneapolis drama editor, advised New York or Hollywood. He came to Hollywood, with a letter to Gloria Stuart and her husband Arthur Sheekman, who had been a St. Paul drama critic. They sent him to the Pasadena Community playhouse, where he directed and acted.

When he hit New York by bus, he pounded the pavements only three weeks before he got a job that lasted 32 weeks. When he played with Ethel Barrymore in "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle" in New York the picture offers began. He got the one he wanted—from Selznick—after Playwright Sidney Howard read his play, "Western Waters," which had flopped on Broadway.

* * *

He took his test for "The Young In Heart" from scenes he had dramatized himself from I. A. R. Wylie's novel. This was confusing when he came to play the same scenes for the picture—dramatized differently by Paul Osborn. He would keep reciting the lines he had written instead of Osborn's lines. If he ever gets to write, direct and act in a picture he won't have that trouble.

The way these three-way contracts usually work out is that the producer, if the actor clicks, forgets about the writing and directing. Reminded of this, Carlson says: "Even if I click, the six months' clause would protect me. I'll be away writing, or in a play, before they can make up their minds."

Although he's gone a long way in 26 years, and thinks Hollywood can make a mind insular, he hasn't a real sneer in his system for the place. And as for acting——

"It's taught me how little I really know. We had one silent scene the other day—close-ups of Janet, close-ups of me, looking at each other through a train window. Both of us had to get it over in pantomime. Janet did hers in two takes. Carlson? Six or eight. I found I was helpless without speeches to make!"

Joe, Max All Set

Champ, Challenger Confident as They Arrange to Move to Fight Site.

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK—(AP)—Max Schmeling, bronzed and ready after five weeks of hard training in the mountains, comes into town today for the crucial fight of his long career, tomorrow night's 15-round tussle with Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis at the Yankee stadium.

It will be a far different entry from that of two years ago when the German schlager came in for his first bout with the wonder boy. The fight experts on that occasion thought they heard the tumbrils rolling through the streets, and the odds were 6-to-1 and up that Schmeling was a goner.

Proud Conqueror.

This time he comes as the proud, confident conqueror, certain that by midnight tomorrow he will be hailed to the four corners of the earth as the first man ever to regain the heavyweight title. He knocked Louis out in the 12th round of their first meeting, and he means to do it again before an expected throng of 75,000, and a $900,000 "house."

Again the weight of expert opinion is against the 32-year-old German, but only in a slight degree by comparison with the 1936 fight, when Max was almost alone in predicting his victory. This time a comprehensive poll of experts reveals that about 40 per cent of them like his chances.

Schmeling is making the five-hour trip from Speculator by automobile and train, arriving here at 10 tonight.

Louis, unless he changes his plans, will not motor in from Pompton Lakes until he goes to the commission office for the official weigh-in at noon tomorrow.

For once, there are no reports that either fighter has injured a hand in training, or is in any way off his feed.

The gamblers still are offering attractive odds. That is, they will lay $9 against your $5 if you fancy Schmeling. If, however, you like Louis, then it becomes necessary to post $10 to win by a knockout, as a surprising number of experts do.

The latest ex-champion to toss his nickel's worth is old Jack Johnson. He is approximately the same color as Louis, but he thinks Joe still has a lot to learn, and that Schmeling will repeat. Jack Dempsey by this time has picked each man a half-dozen times. Officially, he likes Schmeling; privately, he thinks Louis will win by a knockout.

The more ardent Louis boosters see the tan terror wading in and smashing Schmeling to the floor in two or three rounds. The Schmeling supporters doubt that Joe has forgotten those 1936 wallops and expect to see a wary, gun-shy Louis in the ring.

"He Remembers."

Max's latest observations reveal that he is as cocksure as ever, and even a little spiteful in his evaluation of Louis. "He talks much about knocking me out," says Max, "but he remembers how I hit him. Don't worry—he remembers. He knows that he hit me, too, and that I took it."

Louis, who appears to have developed a genuine distaste for the German, repeats doggedly that he will score a quick killing.

This hasn't been played us as a "grudge fight," but there will be considerable feeling behind every punch that is thrown tomorrow night.

Glover Meets CCC Champ On F. H. Show

Faces Ray Howman in Bout on Outdoor Card Friday.

Beauford Glover is not one of the 10 champions to appear on the outdoor amateur boxing card to be run off at the Friendly House Friday, but he will appear in one of the chief bouts on the program.

Glover, who lost the district lightweight title to Curly Miller in the late J. A. C. tournament, will meet Ray Howman of Ashland on Friday's card, Mike Wentz announced today.

Popular Performer.

Despite his defeat by Miller, Glover is regarded as one of Mansfield's outstanding glovemen, and his appearance on the card is expected to help swell the attendance not a little.

The defeat by Miller was the only setback suffered by Glover since he started fighting a couple of years ago.

Glover will meet a pretty tough customer in Howman, who has just returned from a CCC camp in Kentucky, where he did considerable fighting.

Wentz also announced today that Frank Parker, Ashland welterweight, will meet Phil Ganni of Crestline on the card. These two youngsters staged a spectacular battle on the J. A. C. show, with the Ashland boy gaining the decision.

Tickets On Sale.

Tickets for the all-star show are on sale at Hunt's News depot, Musille cigar store, Beeber-Ross restaurant, Whitey's restaurant, Brownie's Lunch, HalBark's store, Sferro lunch and Friendly House. The admission is 40 cents.

Leaders Face Tough Tasks

Commercial Loop Tie May Be Broken Wednesday.

Teams involved in the three-way tie for first place in the Y. M. C. A. Commercial softball league are not expected to have things their own way Wednesday when play is resumed.

Miller's Dairys, who share the deadlock with the Dominion Electrics and Nick's Place, face the fourth place Tappan Stoves at Liberty park, for instance. And the Stoves are not expected to be setups.

The Dominion Electrics engage the Hartman Electrics at Empire field, and the latter club might shock the leader.

Nick's Place meets Sweet's Gulf Oils at North park. While the Oils are tied for seventh place, they appear to pack enough potential power to rate at least a chance to win.

The Page Dairys and All-State Freights tangle at Prospect park in the other game.

WINS 'BOGEY' PRIZE AT FOREMEN'S PICNIC

First prize in the blind bogey golf tournament held at the Westinghouse foremen's club picnic in Gelion over the week-end was won by L. Hoffman. M. Fox, W. Sayre, E. Drummond and P. Wilmore were other "bogey" winners. Ward Ingram was chairman in charge of arrangements. Nearly 200 attended the affair.

Johnson Only Ex-Champ Favoring Schmeling.

(By United Press)

NEW YORK—The ten living former heavyweight champions were asked today to pick the winner of tomorrow's fight and only one—Jack Johnson favored Max Schmeling. Johnson said he thought Schmeling's "cunning and strategy will win over Louis' poor craftsmanship."

Tommy Burns, Gene Tunney, Maxie Baer, Primo Carnera and Jimmy Braddock all picked Louis to win. Jack Dempsey and Jack Sharkey refused to make flat predictions but leaned toward Louis. Jess Willard and Jim Jeffries had no opinions.

Legion Stages Boosters' Day Next Sunday

Mansfield Team Faces Columbus at Fairground.

Interest increased by their unexpected victory over Newark, the American Legion baseball representatives are expected to play before one of the largest crowds of the Central Ohio semi-pro league season Sunday when they meet the Federal Class entry of Columbus at the Fairground.

The Legionnaires will stage their delayed Boosters' Day Sunday, and the success of the ticket sale now being conducted virtually asures a record turnout.

Snaps Win Streak.

After a couple of erratic performances, the Legion team snapped out of its lethargy Sunday by terminating the five-game winning streak of Newark. It was the first defeat of the season for Newark, and a serious blow to it's first half championship hopes.

Aided no little by Mansfield's defeat of Newark, Columbus climbed back into a tie for first place Sunday by whipping New Philadelphia.

The Legionnaires will face a difficult task in stopping Columbus, but Manager Dewey Durant believes his team has now hit its stride, and expects a favorable outcome Sunday.

In the first meeting between the Mansfield and Columbus teams, the Glassmen won a 2 to 0 decision when Howard Patterson collapsed after permitting only three hits in the first six innings.

Pitcher Doubtful.

Although pleased with the pitching of Geiger against Newark, Durant was not certain whether he would start the veteran right hander again Sunday.

Fullager Hurls Johns Park To Undisputed League Lead

Right-Hander Pitches Brilliantly to Defeat Sportsmen, 2 to 0, In Exciting Softball Tussle.

JIMMY FULLAGER gave a pretty good exhibition of pitching out there on the softball mound at Johns park yesterday, and, consequently, the Johns park representatives in the City Class A league are sole owners of first place today.

Fullager gave up six hits yesterday in this all-important game, but he was the master of every situation as he handed the North park club, sponsored by the Richland County Fish and Game association, its first setback of the season.

To give you an idea how effective Fullager was yesterday, the scorebook shows that only one putout was made by the outfield. The last man to face him flied to centerfield.

Escapes Trouble.

The brilliant right hander was in hot water on several occasions, but he pitched himself out of every hole.

For instance, in the fourth, Balbaugh and Seymour singled in succession, and Henrich moved them along with a sacrifice. Fullager merely tightened his belt, struck out Channel and forced Villella to pop to short.

Again in the fifth Fullager run into trouble, but he stopped the Sportsmen. Fullager, who struck out six, issued his only walk in this frame to France. Geiger forced France, but Fogel followed with a single.

Fullager again met the situation. He turned back Dunn on strikes and Harry Ross took Garver's feeble roller down the third base line and threw him out at first to retire the side.

Lefty Garver was little less brilliant than Fullager, but his teammates faltered behind him in the "clutch." He yielded only four hits and the Johnnies needed only one to help score their two runs in the fourth.

Two were out when Manager Johnny Flockenzier's Johnnies tallied their runs. Fritz Garver drew a walk and he scored the first run on Mahoney's double to left center.

Score on Errors.

Seymour's bad throw enabled Shaskey to reach first safely and Mahoney went to third. Villella's failure to hold Henrich's throw at the plate on Bowen's grounder let Mahoney tally with the other run.

One of the features of the game was the play of Henrich at second. He handled six difficult chances brilliantly without a miscue.

The victory was the third straight for the undefeated Johns park club.

Liberty Park Climbs Above Prospect.

LIBERTY park broke into the win column in the City Class A league yesterday when they took the measure of Prospect park, 8 to 4, on the losers' field.

The defeat was the third in a row suffered by the Prospectors in the circuit, and leaves them alone in the basement. The Liberties took undisputed possession of third place.

Takes Early Lead.

Johnny Valentine's team took a 2 to 0 lead in the second inning. The Liberties tied it up in the third, and never trailed thereafter. However, the game was not definitely settled until the ninth when Manager Nick Wagner's men tallied thrice.

John Bush was on the hillock for the Liberty park softballers, and he scattered the nine hits he permitted. Ted Frisbee again did the twirling for the losers, and he was extremely wild, issuing seven walks.

Prospect put across the first two runs of the game on Mertz' double, which followed Johnny Valentine's walk and Fetter's error on B. Valentine's fly.

Aston's home run with Musille, who had walked, on first, enabled the Liberty boys to knot the count in the first of the third. Gemzer hit for the route in the fourth to give the winners a lead they never relinquished.

Successive doubles by Schaeffer and Forman, which followed a walk to Aston, resulted in two more runs for the Liberty club in the fifth. Judy hit his second home run of the season in the last of the fifth to reduce the margin to two runs.

Prospect tallied its last run in the eighth on successive singles by Falk, Weber and Frisbee.

Score Final Runs.

The Liberty club completed the scoring in the first of the ninth on singles by Fisher and Gemzer, Fetter's pass and Bush's long double.

Fielding features were supplied by George Hummel, who made diving catches in the sixth and eighth to rob Frisbee and Judy of extra base wallops. Vogel also made a brilliant catch of Weber's liner.

14-Year-Old Caddy Shoots Hole-In-One

George Davis, Possum Run, Hits Ace in Shelby Match.

Fourteen-year-old George (Porky) Davis today owned an achievement that few of his seniors ever achieve.

Young Davis, a caddy at Possum Run, scored a hole-in-one at the Shelby Country club yesterday as he played with his caddymates in a match.

The young son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Davis turned the trick on the 135-yard No. 3 with a five iron.

George shot an 86 for the 18 holes to help his teammates trim the Shelby caddy team, 17 to 1. Chuck Wynn led the Mansfield representatives with an 83.

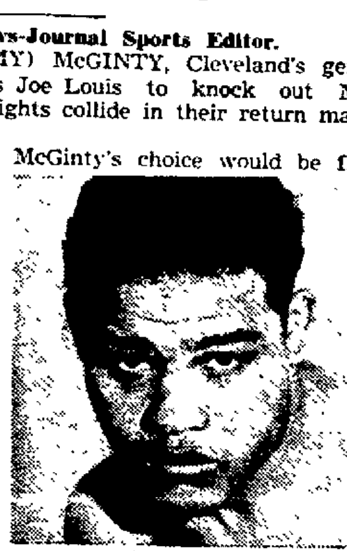
Louis By Knock Out Says Veteran. Expert

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

THOMAS JEFFERSON (TOMMY) McGINTY, Cleveland's genial sportsman and promoter, picks Joe Louis to knock out Max Schmeling when the two heavyweights collide in their return match in New York Wednesday night.



Joe Louis

Under ordinary circumstances, McGinty's choice would be filed along with the hundreds of other opinions made by the "experts" the past few weeks.

But, for two very good reasons, Tommy's prediction must be given close scrutiny. First of all, he flatly and emphatically declared two years ago that Schmeling would put Louis down for the doleful count of ten. And, secondly, just a few weeks ago, he selected Henry Armstrong to better Barney Ross and win the welterweight title by decision.

When McGinty went hook, line and sinker for the German two years ago he startled his friends. Damon Runyan thought so much of McGinty's diagnosis of the fight that he wrote a column about it that appeared throughout the country. McGinty is well-qualified to express an opinion, having served an apprenticeship as boxer, manager and promoter.

It is as a promoter with the enviable reputation of being a square shooter that McGinty has become a widely known figure throughout the country. In Cleveland he introduced innumerable sporting events to the fans.

Among the sports making a first appearance under the McGinty banner were horse racing, six-day bike races, greyhound races, roller derbies, trotting races and championship prize fights. It was McGinty who was instrumental in bringing the Schmeling-Stribling heavyweight championship battle to Cleveland.

* * *

TOMMY'S reputation as a "right guy" has brought to him many enviable offers. When promotions were at a low ebb at Madison Square Garden, they offered McGinty $25,000 a year to act as general manager. More recently, when Walter O'Hara of Narragansett race track and the Governor of Rhode Island were at odds, both parties agreed on McGinty as manager. But McGinty turned down the offers.

The Cleveland sportsman gives his reasons for picking Louis by a knockout. "Louis has learned to hold his left hand high while Schmeling is two years older," says McGinty. "If the German was younger and had never been knocked out I might be tempted to pick him again. But my choice is Louis by a knockout in shorter time than Max turned the trick two years ago."

Open Crucial Series Today

Ohio Teams Figure in Top Games with N. Y. Clubs.

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—After a day of comparative inactivity all major league clubs return to the battlefront today with crucial series scheduled in both circuits.

In the American league the pace-setting Cleveland Indians open a series with the second-place New York Yanks. While the leaders are fighting hand-to-hand, Boston, in a virtual tie with New York, stands a chance to gain considerable ground when it faces Detroit in a double-header.

The National league feature is at New York where the Cincinnati Reds tangle with the Giants.

Chicago, only 2½ contests behind the league-leading Terrymen, tangles with Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh, the fourth flag contender, takes on the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Only three games were played in the majors yesterday. In the National league contests Cincinnati went 13 innings to beat Boston 3 to 1 and Chicago beat Brooklyn 5 to 1 behind another great pitching effort by "Big Bill" Lee.

In the lone American league encounter the New York Yanks tied a major league record as they downed St. Louis 8 to 4. The mark the Yanks tied was for home runs in a single inning. They hit three in the sixth round.

CHAPTER XXXV

He raised himself on one elbow, at the same time dragging off his spectacles. Larry returned his blinking stare without wavering.

"Where shall I put this?" she asked. Her hands were starting to tremble so that she feared the dishes would rattle. "Is this table all right?"

"Damn the table!" Romulus snapped. "You're that Layne girl, aren't you? Put that tray down and get out."

Larry deposited her burden on the bedside stand thankfully. But, instead of following his orders, she stepped behind a chair and steadied herself by holding on to its back. Her knees felt funny and weak.

"A very clever game," the man in the bed sneered. "Very clever. My nephew sends you up here to try to soft-soap me because I have to depend on him while I'm laid up. I might have know. I dare say he's been runing around with you instead of attending to my business. Where is he? Where is he? Go down and fetch him . . . if he's got enough nerve to talk to a man with a broken leg."

"I think Mr. Odell is at the office. Attending to your business."

"So? And how do you happen to be here, then? Sent you to sound me out, I dare say."

Larry took a tighter hold on the chair back.

"I'm here because . . . because I live here, now."

"You what?" Romulus fell back weakly on his pillow. When Larry showed no sign of amplifying her amazing statement, he swallowed hard and managed a, "Since when?"

"Since yesterday. Clayton and I were married yesterday."

* * *

Romulus closed his eyes and a queer grimace twisted his lined face. Larry caught her breath in sudden panic. She remembered what Clay had said about his uncle's heart. Maybe this shock was too much for him! It would be horrible if . . .

"Mr. Wardlaw!" she called breathlessly. "Are you all right?"

"Get out!" he shrilled. "Get out of my house and stay out! Don't ever come back, either."

His cry sent Annie scuttling down the front stairs and to the telephone. Her nervous request to be allowed to speak to Mr. Odell brought the information that he was out to lunch. Then would whoever was talking tell him to come home the minute he arrived at this office? It was very urgent.

Larry, however, was reassured by the strength of Mr. Wardlaw's outburst. It couldn't be that he was dying.

"I can't . . . go. Not now . . ." she faltered. Romulus opened his eyes wide.

"You say you can't go? And why not? This is still my house, so far as I know. Has your precious husband decided otherwise?"

"No, sir, you did."

"No riddles, Miss. I'm not in the humor for them."

"It isn't funny." Larry's anger was coming to her aid. "Clay says you made him sign a silly contract to live here as long as he worked for you. He says he doesn't know how to get out of it for a month, at least. If he has to live here, so do I."

Romulus let that proposition pass. He stared steadily at the bride with inscrutable eyes, then said:

"So you finally succeeded in landing him. I'm wondering how much good you think it will do you. Living here as Mrs. Odell is quite a feather in your cap, eh?"

"Oh. . . ." Larry exclaimed in a low tone. "I married Clay because I loved him . . . loved him enough to come into this horrible house. I wouldn't stay here one hour if I could help it. I think you are a dreadful old man! Clay was going to tell you about us today . . as soon as he had a chance. But I couldn't wait. I'm used to holding my head up and I couldn't go sneaking around another minute. If you'll only tell Clay that he can leave here, I'll be the happiest person in the world!"

"Quite frank, aren't you?"

"No. I'm honest."

* * *

The silence that followed was broken by the forceful slam of a door below stairs, someone hurrying up two steps at a time. Then Clay in the doorway, looking anxiously from his wife to his uncle.

"Larry . . .!" he exclaimed breathlessly.

"Oh, the young . . . your wife . . . is quite all right," Romulus reported harshly. "I couldn't very well put her out, and it seems that she won't go of her own accord." Then he added dryly: "It occurs to me, sir, that she has rather more nerve than you."

"I intended to tell you everything today," Clay answered coolly. "And I may as well tell you that any objections that you may have to all this won't make the slightest difference. I don't wish to seem ungrateful, and I'm not going to hold any resentment against you for what you have done to some people whom I love and respect. That's all past. From now on, I'm living my life in my own way."

"Hoity-toity! Very independent, aren't we? I take it and like it . . . as I have heard you express it."

"I wouldn't go that far, Uncle Romulus." Clay pressed an arm about Larry and drew her to him. "But you'll have to take it," he concluded pleasantly.

* * *

"That seems to settle it. I suppose, now, that you will be expecting me to congratulate you. If I do, young man, it's because you had enough getup to go after something you wanted . . . and get it. I was beginning to have my doubts. And if there is anything I abominate, it is a cold lunch. If you don't mind."

As Larry and Clay were making thankful escape, a querulous voice from the bed hailed.

"Mrs. Odell!"

"Yes, sir."

"What's that sister of yours doing?"

"Muriel is teaching."

"Muriel. . . . She is the first person I have met in years who had the gumption to tell me what she thought of me. Rather a remarkable girl. No business wasting her talents in a schoolroom with a lot of brats. Tell her to come and see me when she has a chance. I've an idea I'd like to do something for her. Some day, I'm going to have a private secretary. Or something."

"It all seems like a dream," Larry mused. "Did it all happen? And to think that Uncle Rommy acts like it was all right. I wish you could have seen him when I took Muriel into his room. He was a regular old Chesterfield. How old is he, anyway, darling?"

"This side of sixty. But, for Pete's sake, don't start any more romancing in that brown head." He laid his cheek against her soft hair. "There's been enough going on around here. I'm still dizzy . . . after all I still have a stocking mill on my hands. By the way, I do have a rather surprising bit of news for you."

"What"? More?"

"Yes. I sounded Griff out about coming back to the plant again. I mentioned it in front of old Schloss. They both turned me down flat. The old man says that he can't run his business without Griff They are going to expand in a big way when business picks up and it looks like your little brother would inherit the outfit. Those two old people certainly are crazy about him."

"Why, I think that's fine. I'd rather see Griff independent than working for anybody. It just seems like everything was turning out right for everybody, doesn't it? And just a little bit ago, it didn't seem that things ever would be right."

"Happy?"

"Terribly."

There was a long silence, broken at last by a chuckle from Clay.

"You know, darling. I was just thinking about that first day I spent in the office. You know ...that morning I asked you to show me the filing system. Remember?"

"What do you think?"

"And when I remember the way you looked at me! Were you mad? If anybody would have told you right then that, in less than six months, you'd be married to me...Well, I guess you'd have been pretty much stunned. How about it?"

"I'm afraid you'll always be kind of dumb, darling. I had it all settled then."

PROFIT SELLING HALTS OPENING STOCK ADVANCE

Trends Slightly Mixed Near Second Hour After Mart Rises Fractions.

BULLETIN

NEW YORK—(AP)—The stock market swept upward again this afternoon with gains of fractions to $3 or more general throughout the list.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market ran into light profit selling today after an opening advance of fractions to a point or so and trends were slightly mixed near the second hour.

Bonds and commodities were a trifle mixed. Foreign securities markets were higher.

Copper shares had the benefit of another lift in the export price of this metal and a boost in the scrap rate. Steel scrap also was advanced.

The subject of easy money again came up for discussion on the announcement of Secretary Morgenthau that he had sold $100,000,000 of 91-day discount bills for an average of $99.996 for each $100 of face value, equivalent to an interest rate of .016 per cent, the cheapest borrowing in the treasury's history.

On the side of the rails were unofficial estimates, based on early reporting roads, that last week's freight loadings took another upward jump in reflection of continued heavy winter wheat shipments and improvement in coal haulage.

FRANCO GAINS

Troops Advance to Strategic River; Capture 100 Foes.

HENDAYE, FRANCO-SPANISH FRONTIER—(INS)—New military successes south of threatened Castellon de la Plana were claimed by Generalissimo Francisco Franco's insurgents today as their line advanced to the strategic river Seco and 100 government troops were captured.

The government forces taken included a machine gun unit and 12 machine guns, according to a Salamanca communique.

Chief action centered on the southern front, according to the insurgent announcement, that Franco's troops continued their advance on the Penarroya, Granjade and Torrehermosa sectors.

The towns of Cuchillar de la Sierra and Penarrosa as well as the Pinos range were wrested from the government forces, it was claimed.

SPEED PLANS FOR SPANISH TRUCE

European Powers Join Hands in Campaign to Terminate Civil War.

tion in Italy. A poor harvest has aggravated Premier Mussolini's need for foreign credits and for these he will be unable to appeal to London until the Anglo-Italian peace pact has gone into effect.

When the non-intervention subcommittee adjourned for luncheon there were definite prospects of unanimous agreement on the withdrawal plan. Even Samuel Kagan, the sharp-tongued Russian delegate who has insisted from the start that the plan was hopeless because of Italian and German duplicity, said:

"There are good prospects of an agreement."

During the luncheon recess, delegates remained in consultation with their governments by long-distance telephone. The atmosphere was tense but distinctly hopeful.

Russia, it was learned by International News Service, has agreed to the British plan, thus paving the way for a full agreement by tonight unless unforeseen difficulties arise.

Samuel Kagan, Soviet delegate, told the committee that his government regards the British plan as tending generally to favor the Spanish insurgents. But, he said, in the spirit of concession and in order not to stand in the way of solution of the problem, Russia is willing to accept it.

Hull Works on Plan To 'Humanize' War.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Secretary of State Hull has begun developing a program to humanize warfare, with the particular objective of stopping aerial bombings of civilians.

Persons close to the state department disclosed today that Hull was devoting much of his time to this subject, brought to his attention by airplane attacks on Spanish and Chinese cities.

Details are not yet ready, nor has the secretary entered into diplomatic discussions with other nations.

State department officials, however, viewed with sympathy the suggestions advanced yesterday in London by Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross.

Davis proposed neutralized hospital zones, an international convention prohibiting or restricting bombing of "open" towns and cities, and zones of immunity for women and children within cities under attack.

Hull probably will not wait until the next session of the congress to proceed with his program. He can sound out other nations without waiting for congressional approval.

SEEKS VOTE ON SCHOOL BONDS

Board Acts to Put $550,000 Issue on Ballot in Aug. 9 Primary.

ing a PWA grant for the building program.

At the same time the board proposed the issuance of $10,000 in bonds inside the 10-mill limitation for the purchase of property at Cline avenue and Wood street as a site for one of the proposed junior high school buildings.

The board holds a six-month option on 10 acres of land at the site and recently purchased four adjoining lots from Walter E. Rusk for $3,000. The 10-acre plat may be purchased at $7,000 at the expiration of the option.

The $10,000 bond issue would require no vote since it would be within the authorized 10-mill limitation. The bonds would be retired in two years.

The county auditor will establish the rate and the retirement dates of the $550,000 in bonds, provided the issue is approved.

The board already has received tentative approval by the state PWA office of its request for a federal grant, and the application is awaiting final approval by the Washington office of the Public Works administration.

Board members dismissed a proposal for a special election on the bond issue, when they learned it would cost nearly $3,000.

Proposed early in May following completion of a survey of school building needs in Mansfield, the building program has been endorsed by the Chamber of Commerce, P. T. A. council, and a number of service clubs in the city.

MEET TODAY TO SETTLE SCRAP OVER BANKING

Morgenthau, Eccles Confer With Other High Officials on Monetary Policy.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the federal reserve board met today with other high government fiscal officials in a final effort to reconcile their differences over banking policies.

After months of negotiations, in which the comptroller of the currency, the federal deposit insurance corporation and the federal reserve board have tried to co-ordinate bank examination procedure at the request of President Roosevelt. Morgenthau has "served notice" to all parties that he will report the matter to the president unless an agreement is reached before midnight Wednesday.

The issue—and it appeared that Mr. Roosevelt himself may have to make the final decision — is whether money on deposit in banks should be used to gear economic machinery to combat depression.

Eccles Opposes.

Eccles, administration advocate of free spending, apparently is the only dissenter. He wants the government to relax its regulations on bank examinatoin to give bankers greater freedom in the investment of money on deposit.

He contends that present federal restrictions on private lending prevent borrowing by small businesses. Make these restrictions more elastic and business will borrow more freely; spend more freely and set the wheels of industry moving at a swifter pace, he argues.

Morgenthau, backed by Chairman Leo T. Crowley of the FDIC and acting comptroller of the currency Marshall Diggs, contends that such a policy would result in taking poor collateral for loans, thus endangering deposits.

The controversey between Eccles and Morgenthau is not the first since they have headed the government's two major fiscal agencies. Last winter Morgenthau opposed Eccles' proposals for increased government spending to fight a deepening business recession. Eccles won that conflict.

Morrow County Youths Draw Jail Sentences.

MT. GILEAD—Hubert Holloway, 20, and Richard Keyes, 20, both of eastern Morrow county, pleaded guilty to charges of petit larceny when arraigned before Judge P. H. Wieland in common pleas court Monday morning.

A Farmer's Diary

By Calvin A. Byers

THE weather has been ideal for all spring crops to grow. In fact, the warmth of early April gave every farmer a start two weeks ahead of last year or the year before. At almost regular intervals, warm, gentle rains encouraged the growth of newly planted fields.

Meadows are fresh and green, dotted with thrifty sheep and cattle. The rye field I passed yesterday has the early harvest fragrance. The heads are growing lighter colored, and bending their tips back toward the ground. I walked into the rye to test its height. It measured several inches above my head. I marveled at the thin, hollow jointed straw, to stand so straight and tall, holding a heavy, seed-filled spike. The wind made great waves across the surface, but each stem swayed and bent and sprang back again. A single stalk alone could not stand so well.

The wheat is turning a deeper yellow color. It is a pleasant sight to look across the even top of such a field and prophesy a splendid harvest only a week or two off. Oats stands knee high, a tender green against the other ripeing fields of grain.

Down the fence rows, the twisted bittersweet hangs out its latest bloom. The wild parsnips flaunt their yellow heads. Blackberry bushes show fine green cones from every thicket.

Catalpa trees on lawns and by the road are blooming now. My neighbor cultivated his corn three times already. His field appears a solid patch of green above the loamy soil.

Fair sized nuts have already formed on the shagbark and pignut trees. The acorns hang by little caps of green on every oak.

Already it is past "knee-deep in June."

ENDORSE PLANS FOR 2 SCHOOLS

C. of C., Real Estate Board Back Proposed $1,000,000 Building Program.

Mansfield's proposed $1,000,000 school building program today had received the endorsement of two more local organizations.

Acting on the recommendation of its committee on education, the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce today had approved the program which calls for two new junior high school buildings, a shop building at the senior high school and the modernization of several of the city's elementary schools.

The Mansfield Real Estate board went on record yesterday as favoring plans after hearing Superintendent of Schools W. L. Miller outline the program.

Financing of the plan would be handled through a $500,000 bond issue submitted to the voters and a PWA grant. The state PWA office gave its tentative approval to the proposal several days ago.

MARTIN PLEDGES PURGE OF REDS FROM AUTO UNION MEMBERSHIP

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—A complete purge of communist members of the United Automobile Workers of America was pledged today in a sensational statement by Homer Martin, president of the powerful CIO union.

Determined to drive out "alien and destructive forces" responsible for sit-down strikes and other violations of contracts, the automobile workers will split their union rather than permit reds to retain their membership, Martin said.

Asked if he would follow the example of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers in barring reds from membership, Martin said:

"Yes. A resolution to that affect will probably be introduced at the next convention of the United Automobile Workers."

Then, reading from a pencilled statement, he said:

"We want peace within our union, but we cannot compromise with a cancer which spreads its malignant and alien poison throughout the body of our union.

"A strong, honest, responsible labor movement is part and parcel of democracy and is America's strongest bulwark against continuation of alien dictatorship, fascist and communist. We must insist it remain a labor movement, and not become a tail to the kite of foreign and hateful political movements."

Five national officers of the radical "unity" group in the U. A. W. were suspended recently by Martin.

Trial of Suit Over Plymouth Will Gets Under Way.

With Judge C. U. Ahl of Crawford county on the bench, trial of a suit involving the will of Charles E. Heath, of Plymouth, who died in May, 1937, opened today before a jury in common pleas court.

Plaintiffs in the case are Everett Heath Krueger and Margot Anne Grueger, minors, of Shaker Heights, grandchildren of Mr. Heath, who seeks to share in his estate.

Under terms of the will, drawn up a short time before Mr. Heath's death, the entire estate, appraised at about $25,000, was left to a son, Earl W. Heath, of Plymouth.

The son, who also was named executor of the estate, is defendant in the suit which was filed by the plaintiff's father, Everett H. Krueger.

BOARD DEBATES DISTRIBUTION OF RELIEF CASH

Must Allocate $6,832 Received From State Among Most Needy Districts.

The same perplexing problem that bobs up regularly every month—that of allocating relief funds that fall far short of meeting the county's needs—faced the board of commissioners again today.

Although they no longer contribute to the relief fund, commissioners had $6,832 in state funds today to divide among the 18 subdivisions in the county which have relief burdens.

Not all of them, however, will share in the distribution, since more than half of the townships are still able to meet their bills without outside help. Most of the allocation from the state auditor will go to Mansfield, Madison township and Shelby, where 1,532 of the 1,681 cases in the county were found last month.

Two Have No Relief.

Only two of the county's 18 townships—Perry and Sandusky—did not contribute to the $18,089 relief bill in May, according to the report of Relief Director Earl A. Nist. Mansfield's bills amounted to $11,452.

The funds ready for distribution include $5,529 in state sales tax receipts and $1,303 in state beer and malt taxes. The county shares every month in the distribution of the tax receipts by the state.

CALLS FOR BIDS ON AUDITORIUM

School Board Orders More Estimates Before Acting on Senior High Project.

Action to recondition and beautify the Senior high school auditorium was taken last night by the Mansfield board of education which authorized J. B. Moke, superintendent of buildings, to obtain estimates on new equipment for the building.

Frowning on estimates of $1,200 for new window drapes, stage border lights, spotlights and a roller sound screen board members suggested that more estimates be obtained and Venetian blinds be installed in the auditorium.

Moke told the board that a new transformer designed to cut electric current costs had been installed at John Simpson Junior high school and that rewiring of the basement of the Hedges school has been completed.

Other improvements he reported included landscaping of the north side of the Brinkerhoff school grounds, repair of plaster in the Senior high school, and relocation of the candy stand at Senior high school athletic field under the north end of the steel bleachers.

SERVICES SET

SHELBY—Funeral services for Mrs. Flossie Seaton Johnson, 37, who died Sunday at the Shelby Memorial hospital, will be held at 2 p. m. Wednesday at the home, 95 Second street, and at 2:30 at the First Church of Christ with Rev. R. T. Crowe officiating. Burial will be in the Oakland cemetery.

SUSPENDS FINE

Judge Orders Convicted Driver to Pay Crash Damages.

Convicted of a charge of careless and reckless driving in municipal court today David Richey, 241 Sturges avenue, was fined $35 and costs. Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch suspended the fine and costs on the condition that Richey pay the damages to the other car which was involved in a collision last Friday.

Richey was arrested Sunday on a warrant signed by John Gross, whose address was not given. Gross charged that Richey ran through a stop sign at the intersection of East Fifth street and North Franklin avenue and collided with his car.

'CAMERA CLUB' MOVE LAUNCHED

Picture-Making Enthusiasts to Meet at C. of C. Rooms on Thursday Night.

An effort to set up a "Camera club" in Mansfield will be made at a meeting of picture-making enthusiasts at the Chamber of Commerce assembly rooms Thursday night.

If sufficient interest is developed, steps toward organizing will be taken, and possible activities for the summer months discussed. Although Mansfield has its quota of camera enthusiasts, there is no organization at present through which those enthusiasts can compare experiences and picture-making technique.

Thursday night's meeting, which will start at 7:30, will be open to all still camera enthusiasts. aLter, if enough interest develops, the proposed club may be expanded to include movie picture-makers.

Such clubs have been established in many other cities, with weekly picture-making excursions arranged. Mansfield enthusiasts hope a similar set-up may be worked out here.

ASHLAND SUIT ASKS $10,000

Plaintiff Charges Defendant Injured Him Permanently by Assaulting Him.

ASHLAND—Charges of an unwarranted attack and assault alleged to have caused severe permanent facial injuries and disability are cited in the $10,000 damage suit filed in the Ashland common pleas court here by C. E. Amend against Daniel Bowen.

In his suit, Amend charges that while in the presence of his two sons and the mayor of Mifflin, on April 30 of this year, the defendant set upon him in an unwarranted assault, and with a concealed object in his hand beat him about the face and head, causing severe contusions and fracture of one face bone and serious physical and nervous disorders.

It is claimed that at the time of the assault Amend was waiting to take Bowman home, and that the defendant committed the assault and battery for no apparent reason.

Because of the alleged attack, Amend claims that he has had to pay large sums for medical care, and that he has not been able to follow his occupation since.

BERLIN ORDER BARS VIOLENCE AGAINST JEWS

Lull in Anti-Jewish Drive Is Heralded as Calm Before New Storm.

(By United Press)

BERLIN — The highest Nazi party quarters, it was revealed authoritatively today, have given orders that violence in the campaign against Jews must cease.

The police checkup of passports and general Jewish activities as well as the steady Aryanization of German business under the economic ministry will continue, it was stated, but will be held within "orderly and legal channels."

Nazis relaxed stern measures affecting Jews of German extraction living abroad today, but there were indications that a purge of Jews at home would be intensified.

Many American Jews came under the decree of several weeks ago requiring all Jews, whether living in Germany or abroad, to register their property under penalty of a heavy fine. Jews were told they had to report their holdings by June 30.

Draws U. S. Protest.

The decree brought protests from abroad, including one from United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull. The protest was never answered. Today, however, it was disclosed that the government exempted all Jews of foreign citizenship from reporting their holdings in Germany unless they also live in Germany.

The decree, issued by Field Marshal Hermann W. Goering, the "economic dictator" of Germany, was re-worded to state that Jews must register German property only if they reside in Germany, irrespective of whether residence is temporary or permanent.

German Jews must register regardless of whether they live here or abroad. Those residing in other European countries have until July 31, and those living outside Europe, until Oct. 31.

Meanwhile, informed persons predicted that the lull in the anti-Jewish campaign over the weekend was a calm before a new storm.

While visiting here, it was understood, Adolf Hitler will meet with his cabinet and discuss a new penal code. Included in the code, it was reported, will be new anti-semetic measures which will be promulgated during the Nazi party congress this summer at Nuremberg.

The new drive to eliminate Jews entirely from Germany's economic and social life was expected to get under way without official ballyhoo and, unlike some instances during the last three weeks, it was believed the police would not interfere when the campaign was resumed.

Foreign tourists in Berlin's shopping districts today still were confronted by the names of proprietors of Jewish stores, painted in tall, neat letters on shop windows by members of the German labor front.

Five Cadets Given Teaching Posts, One Other Teacher Hired; Three Resign.

The 12 principals of Mansfield public schools were reappointed to the same buildings they headed last year by the board of education at a meeting last night. At the same time the board employed six teachers, accepted three resignations and created a new teaching post at Senior high school.

Jesse Beer was reappointed principal at Senior high school and H. J. Dotson at John Simpson Junior high school. Others who were reappointed by the board are Glenn G. Rohleder, Hedges school; G. W. Harmony, Bowman school; C. C. Secrist, Brinkerhoff school; Roy Spetka, Bushnell school; Dean Rex, Carpenter school; E. W. Kissel, Newman school; George Taylor, Prospect school; W. A. Freeman, Western Avenue school; Glen Robinson, West Fifth Street school, and C. A. Divelbiss, Woodland school.

On the recommendation of Supt. W. L. Miller, the board elevated five cadets in the school system to teaching posts and employed Mrs. Kathryne F. Bancroft, Mansfield, as a new teacher.

Get One-Year Contracts.

The cadets who received one-year contracts were Miss Mary Henry, Miss Mary Jane Curtiss, Miss Henrietta Serge, Miss Marie Hoover and Raymond Dent.

Miss Freeda Herring, teacher at the Woodland school, who previously had asked not to be reappointed, was re-employed on her application.

The resignations of Mrs. Leta I Baer, teacher in the Brinkerhoff school; Miss Mary Elizabeth Walker, Senior high school, and Miss Mary McClellan, Newman school, were accepted. All of them resigned to be married.

Miss Lilian Schad, who was on a leave of absence last year because of ill health, was granted another year's leave for the same reason.

The board authorized Supt. Miller to appoint another instructor in the automobile mechanics department at Senior high school. Miller told the board that expansion of the department placed too much burden on the limited teaching staff

7 Secretaries Renamed.

Seven secretaries in the superintendent's and principals' offices were reappointed for one year by Supt. Miller and confirmed by the board. Six of them were granted salary increases ranging from $5 to $10 per month.

Miss Evelyn Neubright was renamed secretary to Supt. Miller at an $8 monthly increase in pay, while Miss Anne Arran was reappointed assistant secretary in his office with a salary increase of $10 a month

Miss Hester Robinson was shifted from the Bowman school to John Simpson Junior high school; Miss Helen Anderson from the Western Avenue school to John Simpson; Miss Ellena Percy from Bowman school to music instructor at Hedges Junior high school, replacing A. LeMoine Derr who was promoted, and John J. Thoms from Newman school to John Simpson.

BATTLE BLAZE

Hundreds Join Fight To Put Out Two Forest Fires.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—(INS)—A forest fire raged today in the Jemez mountains, 60 miles northwest of here. The blaze was reported to have burned over about 600 acres on the San Diego grant, adjoining the Santa Fe national forest.

Meantime, 700 men continued their desperate battle with the fire which has been burning in Gila Forest near Silver City, N. M., for seven days.

15 MORE FACE SPY CHARGES

an average of 16½ hours a day for three and a half months, and who was credited by Hardy with an "extraordinary piece of detection."

Names Fugitives.

But it was intimated in other quarters that subsequent indictments would take in the question of obstruction of justice, such as was involved in the escape of Dr. Griebl and the flight of other important witnesses in the conspiracy.

Hardy said the grand jury would resume its deliberations after "a breathing spell." It was expected the body would reconvene next week.

In the meantime, Hardy said, the status of 16 men and women still held as material witnesses in the investigation of what has proven to be the greatest spy ring in the United States since the World war will remain unchanged.

Of the 18 persons named yesterday in the syndicate which stretched from Dundee, Scotland, to Havana, and from Maine to New York, only four can be tried under the indictment as the situation now stands.

Jailed 4 Months.

All four have been under arrest since the start of the investigation nearly four months ago. Others named in the indictment are residents of Germany, or have fled there.

The four in custody are:

Miss Johanna Hofmann, 26, attractive blond hairdresser on the North German Lloyd liner Europa, who was arrested and found to have secret United States government code books in her possession.

Ex-Sergeant Guenther Gustav Rumrich, 32, Chicago born, who disappeared from his post at Missoula, Miss., in 1935. His bungling impersonation of a government official, while attempting to obtain a sheaf of blank passports last February, led to exposure of the ring.

Private Erich Glasser, 28, a naturalized German, who was attached to the army air corps at Mitchell field, and who was active in the theft of air secrets and transmission of orders from Griebl.

Otto H. Voss, who was employed at the Seversky plant at Farmingdale, L. I, where he allegedly stole sketches and information regarding the construction of wings, gas and fuel compartments and guns of a new type of army pursuit plane being built there.

The four German army officers named are:

Lieut Comm. Udo Von Bonin, of the defense office of the reich war ministry, counter espionage section.

Lieut Comm. Hermann Menzel, his chief aide.

Capt. Lieut. Erich Pfeiffer, chief of the German naval intelligence at Bremen.

Capt. Lieut. Ernst Mueller, chief of the Garman naval intelligence at Hamburg.

Others indicted were: Schmidt, first name unknown, believed to be in Germany.

Sanders, first name unknown, of Hamburg

Mrs Jessie Jordan, recently sentenced to four years in jail following her conviction as a German spy in Edinburgh.

G-man Who Uncovered 'Ring' Quits Post.

NEW YORK — (INS) — Leon G Turrou, the ace G-man who broke America's most sensational espionage story which culminated yesterday in the indictment of 18 claimed spies, submitted his resignation today to J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the G-men, in Washington.

Turrou's only explanation was that he was resigning in the interests of his health.

Turrou is the second G-man ace to retire from the government service after breaking a big case. Melvin Purvis quit soon after he had bagged the bandit John Dillinger with the help of the "Woman in Red" who put Dillinger on the spot.

Turrou will not be exactly idle as he has agreed to do a series of crime articles for a New York newspaper.

RITES SET FOR GUN VICTIM, 12

Alvin Bourgeois Dies as Rifle Accidentally Discharges; Services Thursday.

SHELBY—Funeral services for Alvin Colligan Bourgeois, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Bourgeois, Auburn avenue, who was instantly killed yesterday afternoon when he was accidentally shot by a playmate, will be held at the Most Pure Heart of Mary Catholic church at 10 a. m Thursday with Rev. Michael McFadden officiating. Burial will be in the parish cemetery.

Alvin, a pupil at St. Mary's Catholic school, was shot through the heart by a .22-caliber high velocity rifle at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brubaker, 189 West Main street, where he was playing with the Brubaker's grandson, William Ellery, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Ellery of Rocky River. The tragedy occurred when William's mother and grandparents were attending a funeral.

The Bourgeois boy was shot when one of several rifles, owned by Mr. Brubaker was being inspected by the grandson. According to Chief of Police LeRoy Coffey, who investigated the shooting, Alvin was standing only a few feet in front of the rifle when it accidentally discharged.

William immediately called a physician and, according to Coffey, was attempting to clean the fatal wound when the physician arrived. Coroner Hugh Winbigler returned a verdict of accidental death.

The survivors include four sisters, Beatrice, Joan, Shirley and Suzanne at home, grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Bourgeois of Johnstown, and Mrs. Flora McPilney of Port Layden, N. Y.

Mercury Bounces Way Up High For Debut of Summer

With a flirt of her capricious skirts, summer flounced over the solstice this morning, wearing her brightest smile and bringing honest-to-goodness summer temperatures.

At four minutes after 9 o'clock this morning, according to the World almanac, the sun reached the point where its rays fall farthest north on the earth's surface, a point known as the summer solstice.

Contradictorily, the farther the sun is from the earth, the more intense the heat. The heat is caused by the fact that the sun's rays are more direct, due to the tilting of the earth on its axis.

Although thermometers dropped to 53 during the night and the average for the 24-hour period was three degrees below normal, the official temperature this noon was 83.

Farmers and gardeners who have hoped for rain are again doomed to disappointment if the predictions of the weather bureau are correct, for tonight will be fair and there will be little change in temperature Wednesday.

Then again, it's easier to blame things on the government than on ancestors.

A Chicago schoolgirl took five examinations for scholarships and won all of them—but she'll probably have to plow under at least four.

Out in Iowa a Horse Thief Detecting association plans to disband—after having gone 25 years without chasing a horse thief. This evidences amazing inability at readjustment to new needs.

Danger In Government Competition.

AN EDITORIAL entitled "Subsidizing Depression," which appeared recently in the Christian Science Monitor merits attention. It said:

"With one hand the administration is working to make peace with the public utilities and encourage investment in a field which might be started for business recovery. The RFC is planning federal loans for utility construction. The SEC is trying to work out the holding company act so as to damage as little as possible companies which must be disentangled. . . .

"But with the other hand the administration is pushing a spending-lending bill which would give cities PWA funds up to 45 per cent of the cost of municipal electric plants. Thus it is subsidizing governmental competition in the very same field in which it is trying to remove fears of government competition and encourage private investment.

"This is not fair yardstick competition. It is setting up a governmental monopoly, blocking recovery investment, and subsidizing the destruction of present utility values. If that is what the left hand means, why not let the right hand know it? Or if that is not what the administration's policy means, why not explain to the country?"

That presents an ominous situation in its true light. No industry in this country is more eager to go ahead than the utilities—and probably no industry could contribute more to re-employment, stimulated purchasing power, and general business revival. But no sane investor is going to risk his money in the utility or any other industry when he knows that his savings may be destroyed almost overnight by subsidized, tax-free, unregulated government competition.

There is a vast difference between regulatory laws to curb bad practices by privately owned utilities and the present trend toward government ownership.

Management of business enterprises by political appointees has not thus far proved either economical or efficient.

There should be no return to the promotional build-up of fictitious "values" in utility stocks, with the maze of "holding companies" designed to pile up unearned profits. Nor should there be further encouragement of the idea of government invading the field of private business—unless it should later appear that, in specific instances, the public interest can be protected in no other way.

Bad Neighbor Policy.

THE border dispute between Ecuador and Peru has quieted down, perhaps because Uncle Sam worked so hard to compose the difficulties. Italy, too, it is now reported, was friendly to both sides, but in a different way.

Italy has an airplane factory in Peru, but offered to supply Ecuador with all the airplanes she might need in case of war between the two countries. It is in Peru that Italy has the greater influence at present, but the generous offer to assist Ecuador may have been intended to even things up.

It is to be hoped that the two South American countries recognize this willingness to "play both ends against the middle" and will steer clear of all military aid from abroad.

Italy's attitude in this instance is not particularly remarkable. All countries seem to feel equally liberal about munitions. Private concerns, acting with surprising security from government interference, sell deadly armament across international borders, so that a soldier at any time may die from a bullet made in his native land.

Pulling Out From the Curb.

THE driver of a parked car, who pulls away from the curb and strikes another car, is in the wrong "no matter what kind of hand signal or sign he gives," according to court decision in a Columbus case.

The court holds that a motorist traveling legally in a straight direction has the right of way over a motorist pulling away from a curb, and that the parked driver must wait until traffic is clear.

Rights of a motorist pulling away from a curb are apparently among the least understood of all traffic regulations. Many drivers have formed a habit of turning away from the curb without regard for cars approaching from the rear. This constitutes a dangerous practice. The Columbus decision may serve to reduce this sort of bad driving.

From Rails to Roads.

THE Pennsylvania Turnpike commission proposes to build a modern highway over the abandoned right-of-way of the South Pennsylvania railroad. The plan calls for a 162-mile, four-lane, divided roadway covering most of the distance between Pittsburgh and Harrisburg. It will make use of nine tunnels of the old railroad.

There are other routes in Pennsylvania which offer a shorter drive between the two cities, but they are mostly two-lane roads with many curves, often blocked by snow in winter. The turnpike will be an improvement on these, conforming to the latest highway safety standards, eliminating grade crossings, and making use of clover-leaf approaches to permit a continuous flow of traffic. It is estimated that trucks using the turnpike will save two to six hours in crossing the state.

"Trousers for women," says a New York dispatch, apparently by an observer who hasn't been around much.

One trouble with youthful graduates is that they expect to find a lot of service stations along the road to Success.

Some folks think that little can be expected before 1942—as at least a couple of years will be needed to clear up the mess.

Keeping Step

—By LESLIE EICHEL

THE OPPOSITION to President Roosevelt now is scattered far and wide. Congress is at home trying to repair its own political fences. But the president can go on, accomplishing a great deal. He can help the farmer, the worker, the small businessman—and even the big businessman. And that, undoubtedly, is what he plans to do. His actions may not prove the right thing—time may determine. But at least he will be trying—and he will, you can count on that.

Thus his own political fences will be made more secure than those of his opponents. It is conceivable that anti-New Dealers will pass much of their time explaining to their constituents. The back-slapping "interests' who jollied them on while congress was in session will not be on hand, to any great extent, among the homefolk.

WHEELER

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, once considered too radical to be associated with by respectable old conservative senators, now is the chief of the conservative opposition to President Roosevelt.

Nearly everybody has rubbed his eyes over this during the past year, including the conservatives. What has occurred to the senator? (He in turn asks, What has occurred to the president?) One columnist goes so far as to say that Wheeler has become more dangerous as a potential Fascist rabble-rouser then the late Huey Long was.

That, however, is not quite true. Wheeler has not been able to arouse anybody. In fact, he has isolated himself.

If it is the presidency at which he is aiming, he cannot hope to get the Democratic nomination. Even if the New Dealers and Old guard are tied in the convention, the nomination would not be given to Wheeler by the conservatives. They have "more deserving" lineal descendants, such as Vice President Garner.

And the Republicans would not for a moment consider nominating a Democrat. They have too many hungry Republicans yawning for the presidential nomination—lifelong Republicans.

As for the third-partyites, the La Follettes will have nothing to do with Wheeler, even if he did run for the vice presidency on their father's Progressive ticket in 1924.

Wheeler proably controls his own constituency—Montana remaining largely pro-copper "big interests"—but his national ascendancy seems foreclosed.

Thus is he fighting for the "principle" of it—or does he believe he can gain coalition support by attacking the New Deal?

1940

The 1940 puzzle remains. Who will succeed Roosevelt?

Constructive opposition was lacking in the last congress. Reform of progressive measures were fought with the old tricks. Tricky measures were passed without a peep. Many representatives and senators — a surprisingly large number in view of the sentiment at home—voted as powerful interests desired.

That was not smart politics, some observers point out. It almost is a way to force a third term on F. D. R. The next congress will tell the tale

The people are eager for a new leader—a vital, forward looking leader. They will accept Mr. Roosevelt again only if no other leader arises.

Difficult Task Wished on Sheppard

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas is conspicuously a conscientious statesman.

Of cours all our lawmakers are conscientious, but not all of them are conspicuously so. The Texan is so exceedingly conscientious as to be, sometimes, a trifle troublesome to certain of his associates.

For example, he annoyed several of them by his unwillingness to direct an investigation of possible future charges of relief-in-politics, in connection with pending congressional primaries and next November's election. In fact, such charges are not altogether in futurity. They are being made already.

* * *

KIND OF COMMITTEE.

The allegation (as we all know) is that the New Deal administration, having control of relief funds, is so utilizing them as to promote the chances of its own friendly candidates, to the corresponding disadvantages of less friendly ones.

That was a matter that the anti-New Dealers wanted investigated, as the campaign wags along, with a view to a scandal, if any, after election day.

Naturally the New Dealers desire no post-election scandal — if they win the election. However, they have been convinced, all along, that an anti-New Deal investigating committee would do its best to provide one.

Hence their objection to that kind of a committee.

* * *

PAST COMMITTEES.

Now, there is, as a regular thing, a senate committee to investigate senatorial campaign expenditures in election years.

The idea is to guard against bribery or near-bribery.

In recent years committees of this sort put the skids under Frank Smith in Illinois and William S. Vare in Pennsylvania.

According to their respective home state returns Smith and Vare appeared to have been elected to the senate, but their investigating committees found that it was done irregularly. So the senate barred them.

* * *

SHEPPARD'S TASK.

This year's investigating committee is headed by Senator Sheppard.

It was proposed, by Senator Millard E. Tydings of Maryland, with nine senatorial backers, that a separate committee be created to investigate relief-in-politics.

Others said, "No, the usual campaign expenditures committee is sufficient."

Tydings, et al, insisted that miscellaneous chicanery and relief-in-politics are distinct propositions, calling for different organizations.

* * *

"HOT SPOT."

One readily can understand why Senator Sheppard preferred not to be involved in a twin inquiry.

The senator is a dead-honest old man.

He believed in prohibition—but let that pass. He meant well.

At the present juncture he is a New Dealer (not a violent one, but moderate), asked to adjudicate between "pro" and "anti" New Dealerish voting.

He is on a "hot spot."

Conscience versus the obvious!

* * *

RELUCTANTLY ACCEPTS.

The senate wished the whole investigation upon his committee, regardless.

He reluctantly accepted it.

He has GOT to do a good job—conscientiously.

Whether or not he can do it—as mapped out to him — is a problem.

Wasted Treasure.

Imagination is one of man's most delightful, most dangerous gifts....It is rich stimulus, it is a deadly narcotic. It is joy, it is agony. Help in our moments of growth, hindrance in our periods of decay.

With imagination man climbs to the heights, makes great inventions, dreams astounding achievements, becomes a Napoleon, an Edison, a Shakespeare, a Helen Keller,...And with imagination, misdirected, he goes down into the pit of crime, self-pity, ignominy, and despair — and wastes the precious powers of his imagination.

Slouched in his easy chair, he imagines his work done, himself on a peak above his fellows, envied and acclaimed. Standing erect and resolute, he imagines the first step he must take toward the creation of his dreams. ...The languid dreamer imagines his future as a magnificent garden where fragrant flowers nod in the breeze. He wanders through its beauty, picking a rose here and lily there and arranges a charming bouquet. The practical gardener tests the soil and prepares his beds and plans every step of the way having in his mind the height of his plants and the color of the flowers, does the hard spade work and PLANTS HIS SEEDS....And thus, out of his imagination creates the garden of his dreams.

And thus we sit and plan our future happiness....We dream of the day when all life will be perfect, when all human relationships will be nicely adjusted, and we are all that in our liveliest, most wistful moments we dreamed of becoming. We think of ourselves as POSSESSING happiness. And when we rouse ourselves from that sweet exercise in imagination, we find ourselves as we were before, still sitting, having taken no step forward toward the happiness we wish for ourselves. We have concentrated on the goal and have leapt lightly over all the necessary steps between today and the far future....But that is a narcotic dream. No happiness for the future is possible that is not grounded in the happiness of today. We shall have no happiness in the unlived distance unless we are happy in the vital present... The day-dreaming idler wastes the great treasure of imagination.

Considering Sad Plight of Beavers

Just as we were about to sound out Mr. Harry Hopkins about Mr. Harold Ickes' proposal to mobilize the beavers of Idaho to help construct dams, we realized that a beaver is to Mr. Hopkins as the boojum was to the Bellman in "The Hunting of the Snark." The mere mention of a beaver would be enough to cause Mr. Hopkins softly—if not silently—to vanish.

For the beaver represents all those qualities which Mr. Hopkins believes belong irrevocably to the wrong-headed era of rugged individualism. The beaver works incessantly. He looks after himself. He lays aside today against a rainy—or rather, a droughty—tomorrow. He is provident, conservative, diligent, tireless, constructive. He provides for his own family and keeps his own house in repair. He—but why expatiate?

Then we thought of Miss Perkins, and realized what a despicable trick Mr. Ickes had played on her by waiting till she was out of the country before making known his project to pay $8 apiece for beavers and garner 3,000 per cent profit on each one. No economic royalist ever conceived such exploitation—and there is no provision for a five-day or a thirty-hour week. In fact, it is not unlikely that many of them will work as much as eighteen hours a day. To make matters worse, Mr. Lewis has not been consulted. Mr. Green has been kept in the dark. The N. L. R. B. first learned of it in the morning papers. Even the beavers themselves have not been consulted.

Only one hope lies before them—that Mrs. Roosevelt, when she realizes the enormity of this bit of conscript labor, will see to it that something is done to make their lot easier. Beavers may be well enough fed and they are certainly beautifully clad; but their housing conditions are obviously substandard. Something streamlined, with hot and cold water, and an electric plug or two for a power saw and an electric mud heater, might be worked out. Will Mr. Tugwell please answer?—New York Herald-Tribune.

Health Advice

Definite Cure of Syphilis Possible.

—By DR. ROYAL COPELAND

Through the newspapers, radio and other methods of spreading knowledge, the public has been educated in the dangers of venereal disease. It is hoped that as a result of energetic methods of control and treatment now formulated, this scourge will be completely eradicated.

Today I want to tell you some simple facts about syphilis. It is a dangerous disease and often overlooked in its early stages. Indeed, all too often it is not recognized until great damage has occurred. It is extremely dangerous because it is readily passed from one individual to another.

The disease can be transmitted from mother to child. It is a frequent cause of miscarriages and still-births, as well as involvement of the heart, arteries and brain. It causes stroke, blindness, deafness and other distressing effects.

The germs of the disease enter the body, usually causing a sore at the place they enter. This sore is medically known as a "chancre." Sometimes the chancre is located in an inaccessible portion of the body, a place where it may easily be overlooked.

This sore ultimately heals, leaving behind a slight scar. But this is not by any means the end of the trouble. The poisons reach the blood stream and are carried to distant parts of the body where they may do great damage.

If the disease is recognized in the first stage, or the chancre is still present, treatment should be started immediately. This treatment, if continued, will ultimately entirely eradicate the disease. The treatment takes much longer if the infection is allowed to run on to subsequent stages of the disease.

Let us see what happens when the chancre is overlooked and no treatment is begun. Several weeks after the sore is healed a rash appears on the skin. This rash is peculiar in that it does not itch. Sores appear in the mouth and throat. Swelling of the glands may be present. Headaches, fever and bone pains may occur. The hair of the scalp and eyebrows may fall out.

Physicians are often asked whether syphilis can be cured. The answer is definitely yes. But this is true only if proper treatment is given. Unless applied in the early stages of the disease, it will be necessary to report to the doctor at least once a week for a period of a year or more.

The treatment can only be given by a physician. If there is any doubt as to whether you require this treatment, consult your family physician or the local board of health.

How It Started

"A Bosom Friend."

"Can you tell me the origin," writes one of our readers, "of the expression, 'bosom friend.' It is a rather interesting figure of which, this for 'good friend" on which the imagination can play. And I'll wager it is no modern invention."

It is a happy choice of words, 'bosom friend' for the friend one takes to one's bosom, so to speak in time of joy or trouble. And our reader judges correctly, it is no modern invention. The expression goes back to 1590, when it was used by the old author, Greene, in his "Never Too Late."

Everyday Poems

—By GEORGE ELLISTON

Dear Haven.

A mother's lap is haven for
So many childhood tears.
There speed the small folk when their play
Is stopped by hurts or fears.

And seated there dear solace find,
The hurt is healed, and speech
That comforts mothers give, deep down
The words and kisses reach.

I too, have found this haven sweet
Who now a tribute pay
Because of one, to mothers, all,
The gentle words they say.

Sweet it is, to look back when time
Has measured many years,
And feel in memory those hours
When mother hushed our tears.

Listen, World!

We're Nearer God Today.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THE world is a better place today. The human race is farther along its weary march toward civilization.

You may not agree. You may point to the paper in which this is printed and recount the sad and shameful record of murder, suicide, kidnaping and divorce. Yet I repeat—

We're nearer God today.

And the trembling, tear-stained hands of two heart-broken women have lifted us there.

When the struggle at last is ended, and the list of the heroes is told . . . this thing which Mrs. Donald Carroll and Mrs. Frederick Matthiesen have done will stand at the head of the scroll. For never did human spirits face a crueler test, or rise more nobly to it, than these two.

You know the pitiful story. Two children, hardly more than babes, frantically in love. Sixteen-year-old Donald Carroll . . . eighteen-year-old Charlotte Matthiesen. Sweet, stolen moments . . . wild romantic vows . . . lovelorn partings while the friendly parents smiled, thinking it "puppy love." Then — tragedy—swooping, vulture cruel, on their young helplessness! Nature had trapped them. No longer could they drift in dreams . . . vague dreams of marriage, someday. Now—right now—or else—

But how could they marry right now? They had no money. They dared not tell. There was no place to go.

And so—poor, cornered babes—they took the only way they knew. A double pact with death. One last, long, lingering kiss . . . And then the gun, against her soft young breast. But when he saw the threshing limbs, the spurting blood, the boy could not go on. Instead, he ran for help.

You know the rest. For her—a shroud. For him—the bars, the gaping crowd. Sheer hell.

Yet, in that hell, a glimpse of God's white heaven. For, when he took his seat before the bars, the other four went with him—those parents who had lightly called young frenzy "puppy love." As one, those four, stood up beside the boy!

But this could not be possible. Perhaps, for the two men. Men see things differently. Fathers are not as close . . . But mothers? Mothers are tigresses! Mother love has no power to bend and yield . . . brute wild, it kills the thing that hurts its young. And, surely, here was reason for the wildest rage.

He'd killed her girl!

She'd trapped her boy!

Surely those mother hearts must fill with murderous hate!

But they did not!

Frail hand in hand, they took their place—together. Linked step by step, they walked together through that hell. And with one trembling voice said—"WE, THEIR MOTHERS, ARE THE ONES TO BLAME. WE DID NOT WATCH . . . WE WERE NOT READY IN THEIR HOUR OF NEED. THEY WERE BUT BABIES. OURS—OURS IS THE CRIME."

And the crowd gasped. And the judge stared. And from the prosecution came an outraged yell, "You've sold your souls." But still their love stood like a wall about the boy . . . and still their courage held them steadfast on the rack.

And now, today, I say the world's the better for those two.

They've shown how tall the human soul can stand above the savage muck of hate and pride. They've proved that, though hearts break, their love may be as wide—

As heaven itself!

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—I am writing this in bed, being ill and under strict orders from my doctor not to move for another week at least. And during this time I have had an opportunity to cogitate diverse matters brought to my attention by kind friends who ladened themselves with books and flowers and converged on this room.

My friends pity me for having to lie all day in a bed when outside the sun is shining and the grass is growing greener by the hour and the south wind is murmuring invitations to a swim in the old swimming hole.

But my friends do not understand. I like to lie in bed, whether the rain is flaying the housetops or the sun is shining brightly. I can not understand anyone wanting to go swimming, or to a theater, or anywhere at all when you can lie peacefully in a clean white bed, with people waiting on you hand and foot.

* * *

TO ME there is something exhilarating in the caress of soft hands against one's forehead and vague voices murmuring, "Is his fever abating, doctor?" . . . "Should we continue the liquids, doctor?" . . . "You say he should have two teaspoons every three hours, doctor?"

And I like the tiptoeing and the quiet closing of doors which accompany these sessions of enforced repose. . . . They are evidence of thoughtfulness in a world made callous by neglect and abuse.

I have had a lot of fever in the past few days, but that is a small price to pay for the sweets of convalescence. To me convalescence is an endless daisy-chain of long, dreamless sleeps, and loving friends bringing you new books in bright shining jackets, and telephone calls filled with drama and suspense. . . . For you never know who those calls are from until someone answers and you try to piece it out from the talk at this end. Perhaps it is from the office wanting to know if you will have those columns on time. . . . Or maybe an old friend has bobbed up in town anxious to go on a spree. What fun to hear them tell him, "A party! Why, he is practically at death's door."

* * *

NO SUCH thing. You couldn't kill me with an ax. They think I am in a pretty bad way because I lie so quietly. But that is what I like to do. Just close my eyes and be lazy while people fuss over you. I lie quietly like this when I am in the best of health.

But this, this is something special. Days and nights no longer have any significance. I drift off to sleep, and waken refreshed. I read a book. I thumb through all the new magazines. It may be three o'clock in the morning. It may be high noon. The hours mean nothing. Sometimes, in a vindictive mood, I set the alarm for some ridiculous hour, and when it goes off I lie here and thumb my nose at it, because I don't have to get up. That's getting even! That's telling 'em, eh, Sugar? Ain't dat putting' ol' Clock in his place?

* * *

The human voice ordinarily can be heard 150 yards, but if you say "I'll pay for the drinks," it can be heard all over town.
